OCD Voted Cash But Warned It Faces Inquiry

Treasury Denied Money for Tax Movie; Mrs. Roosevelt Asks Chance to Explain

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

After administering a thorough verbal spanking to the Office of Civilian Defense and warning that its "extra-legal" activities would be investigated soon, the House yesterday voted that agency one hundred million dollars with which to purchase gas masks and other equipment needed in its protective services.

At the same time it denied the Treasury Department $80,000 with which to pay for a Donald Duck movie designed to popularize income taxes, members arguing the American people are perfectly willing to buy defense bonds and pay taxes for war purposes.

Both items were carried in a $160,412,611 appropriations bill, which passed on a voice vote and was sent to the Senate with two amendments written in—one eliminating Treasury funds for movies and the other stipulating none of the one hundred million dollars voted for OCD could go for "fan dancing, street shows, or other theatrical entertainment."

Vote Bi-Partisan

Although the latter amendment is meaningless technically, as the bill earmarked the OCD funds for equipment, its sponsors pressed it as a vehicle with which to make clear their disapproval of "frills and useless activities at a time when the country should be devoting all its energies to winning the war."

Both Democrats and Republicans voted for the amendment, which grew out of criticism which followed the appointment of Melvyn Douglas, screen star, to head a new OCD arts council, and Mayris Chaney, dancer friend of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, to be in charge of children's activities in the physical fitness division.

Mrs. Roosevelt, assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense, declared at her press conference yesterday she would be "perfectly delighted if the gentlemen who are doing the talking would allow me to tell them the truth."

"Congressmen have offices, and I have feet," she said, asserting there were various questions concerning civilian defense she did not want to discuss, except with the "Congressmen themselves."

Her Move, Taber Says

Asked whether she did not think activities designated for Douglas and Miss Chaney in OCD were duplicating work set out for other agencies, the First Lady declared:

"You are bringing up questions on the whole physical fitness division. That I will answer if the Congressmen will give me a chance."

When Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee and leader of criticism directed at OCD's "extra-curricular activities," was asked if he intended to invite Mrs. Roosevelt to explain Miss Chaney's work to him, the Congressman declared:

"She knows that she is without the law providing for OCD. She should go before the Military Affairs Committee and ask for a new bill if she wants to continue to make

Men Crash First Lady's Conference

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt announced yesterday, after a half dozen reporters had "crashed" her press conference at the Office of Civilian Defense, that next Monday she will resume her former practice of meeting ladies of the press at the White House.

The First Lady's press conference, unique in the Nation's history, was changed to OCD early in January—but had continued to be partially a White House activity, with her personal and social secretaries on hand to keep the record and help with announcements of her engagements.

When the men showed up yesterday—to ask questions about the appointments of Melvyn Douglas and Mayris Chaney to posts in OCD and about civilian defense generally—Mrs. Roosevelt agreed they could come in after she had finished with the personal part of the conference. When a photographer started to make a picture, however, she vetoed the idea, declaring pictures were never permitted.

German Attache Here Made Two Payments To Aviatrix, Jury Told

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

A plastic surgeon who once lifted her face and an airport manager who kept files on people he considered subversive depicted Laura Ingalls yesterday as a swastika-wearing enthusiast who berated President Roosevelt for helping England instead of Nazi Germany.

The 38-year-old Miss Ingalls, once a leading stunt flier and more lately an isolationist orator, went on trial before Justice James W. Morris, of the District Court, on a charge of failing to register as a paid agent of the German government.

"Mystery Witness" Named

Special Prosecutor M. Neil Andrews disclosed in his address to the jury that the "mystery witness" who appeared before the grand jury against Miss Ingalls is Julia Kraus, former employe of the Treasury and the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Andrews told the jury of two women and ten men that Miss Kraus introduced Miss Ingalls to Baron Ulrich von Gienanth, Second Secretary of the German Embassy, SS reserve officer and suspected Gestapo agent. The Government charges that Von Gienanth financed Miss Ingalls' isolationist activities.

Burned-Out Normandie Lists Heavily

Liner 'Definitely' Can Be Repaired, Adm. Andrews Says; Loss $5,000,000

(Pictures on Page 8.)

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 9.—Sparks from a welding torch, landing on life preservers, touched off a fire today which roared through the three upper decks of the former French liner Normandie, once the pride of the French merchant marine.

As the crackling flames were brought under control at about 6 p. m., after three and one-half hours battle by firemen, the 60 million dollar vessel, now the U. S. naval auxiliary Lafayette, listed 10 degrees to port in her berth.

To counterbalance the weight of the tons of water pressing her to port, Rear Admiral Adolpheus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District, ordered a hole chopped into her starboard side and water was pumped into the ship's starboard tank.

"I know the damage has been confined principally to upper decks—the skydeck, A deck and some of the B deck," Andrews said, adding that the ship "definitely will be able to be repaired."

[Damage was estimated unofficially at five million dollars, the United Press reported.]

1 Killed, Over 200 Hurt

The admiral said the hole was hacked into the 83,432-ton Normandie's side after "we thought first that it would be best to sink the ship by scuttling her." A plan to open the seacocks was abandoned in preference for the other method.

Although approximately 2200 workmen and Navy personnel were aboard when the fire started, only one workman was known to have been killed. He was Frank Trentacosta, 36, who died in Roosevelt Hospital of a fractured skull and internal injuries suffered when he jumped from a deck to the pier.

At least 110 persons were hospitalized and about the same number treated for less serious burns and injuries. Six of the injured were of the Navy. They were taken to the Naval Hospital.

Fear was expressed in first reports of the fire that 200 men were trapped deep in the vessel, but Andrews said after an inspection trip of the smoked scarred interior that no bodies were found.

Following a survey of the vessel, the admiral said, "There is nothing to indicate sabotage."

Fire Spreads to Passageways

The fire spread from the burlap wrappings of life preservers, he said, to passageways and into mattress-filled bunks. With the first sign of flames, he said, a hose was pulled out on deck and extinguishers brought into use, but when they proved ineffective, the ship's fire alarm was sounded and a call was sent in for the city fire department.

The admiral's version of the fire was upheld by Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy, who was aided in his investigation by members of the detective bureau of the police department, the staff of District Attorney Hogan of New York County and the intelligence services of the Navy and Coast Guard.

It was "an accident," Brophy said.

Tons of water from every available piece of land and seagoing Manhattan fire equipment were thrown into the gray-clad monster, from which huge billows of midnight black smoke rose high into a brilliant winter sky to be seen and wondered at by thousands for

30 Sirens Installed in Capital As Temporary Air-Raid System

A temporary air raid siren warning system has been organized for the Capital, Lieut. Col. B. C. Snow, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, announced yesterday.

Col. Snow said that 30 approved sirens had been installed in strategic spots throughout the city, but he withheld the locations admittedly as a precaution against sabotage.

Each of the sirens must be set off individually at present, but within ten days, Col. Shaw asserted, they will be placed under a central control so that a single button will set the sirens off simultaneously.

The sirens, Col. Shaw said, "could awaken a considerable portion of the city, if need be." He pointed out, however, that the sirens are but a temporary emergency air-raid alarm system, to be available and used if necessary, until 42 compressed-air horns can be obtained and installed.

It is planned to have altogether

Greedy Vitamin Eaters Curbed By War Board

The appetite of greedy vitamin eaters was forcibly curbed yesterday by the War Production Board, which forbade the manufacture of multivitamin pills, capsules, tablets or liquids containing more than 5000 units of vitamin A in the largest daily dose.

Forced with conserving the precious supplies, 75 per cent of which formerly came from Norwegian and Japanese fish liver oils, the WPB said that the average human body cannot absorb more than 5000 vitamin A units a day, and anything in excess is wasted. A special exception is made, however, in preparations intended for persons suffering an unusual vitamin deficiency.

Vitamin A, the WPB explained, must be reserved for human consumption, where it is particularly valuable in building up resistance against infection and in maintaining good eyesight. In the latter use it is essential to the Air Corps in the prevention of "night blindness," the WPB said.

Moscow, Feb. 9.—Aided by American-made planes, the Russians hurled the Germans back for new and smashing gains on both ends of the 1500-mile front today and Soviet authorities announced the capture of "one village after another" from German forces floundering westward in disordered retreat.

Slashing through vast, hastily laid German mines, Red forces made their most important gains in the Donets Basin where the German withdrawal was taking on the appearance of a rout.

The drive in this area was all the more impressive because Marshal Semean Timoshenko's men were battling the Nazis through heavy snowstorms whipped by gale-like winds.

Farther to the south, Soviet commanders announced massive blows against the Nazi besiegers of the big Crimean naval base of Sevastopol. In the battle for that vital port alone, Soviet commanders declared the Germans have lost upwards of 40,000 men killed and wounded.

Large Force Trapped

In the north, the Russians announced that in the last few days the Red army surge had liberated more than 30 villages, annihilated two battalions of German infantry, wiped out a big headquarters and captured important enemy staff documents.

In this area the Germans were falling back rapidly, fighting stubborn rear-guard actions. The heaviest fighting raged in the Kalinin sector, where large German forces were trapped in the recent Soviet drive above and below the city.

Additional gains were registered on the central front, where the uninterrupted drive toward Smolensk blasted the Germans from 18 more localities between that Nazi-held strong point and Moscow.

Hitler Rushes Reinforcements

Stockholm reported Red forces had occupied the eastern suburbs of Rzhev, northern anchor of the Germans' shattered Moscow front. Rzhev, 80 miles southwest of Kalinin and 130 miles northwest of Moscow, has been virtually encircled for days. Nazis remaining there were described as "putting up

Yanks Parry Foe's Efforts To Infiltrate Bataan Lines

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Meeting strong attacks in front, rear and from the air, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's big guns and hard-fighting Infantry have jolted a renewed Japanese offensive.

Sharp-eyed gunners on Corregidor and the other fortifications of Manila Bay, the War Department announced, spotted hidden enemy batteries along the south shore of the bay and pounded them effectively. Several direct hits were made and some of the Jap batteries silenced.

Meanwhile, enemy dive-bombers struck at MacArthur's positions on rugged Bataan Peninsula, and several attempts were made to infiltrate troops through his front lines.

Big Push Yet to Come

Heavy infantry fighting followed at various points on the thumb-like Bataan Peninsula, the Army communique stated, and all of the attacks were repulsed by American-Filipino defenders.

Not yet, however, have the Japs launched an all-out attack on the American positions, comparable with the earlier heavy enemy assaults. The return of Jap dive bombers to the battlefield, however, and the establishment of batteries on the south shore of Manila Bay near the abandoned naval base at Cavite, indicate that another "big push" may be coming.

When it comes, it is expected to include heavy frontal assaults from the north, infiltration attempts at points where the mountains make a continuous defense line impracticable, landing efforts from the sea and artillery attacks from across Manila Bay.

The action reported yesterday indicated that MacArthur's troops are ready for another heavy Japanese drive and may be expected to furnish stiff resistance and take a heavy toll of the enemy when it comes.

How long his little force can continue to hold out against the overwhelming enemy odds is problematical, but by tying up more than 200,000 first-line Jap troops for two months the stalwart defenders have played an important role in the Pacific war.

U. S. Fleet Opens Supply Line Across Pacific to New Zealand

By H. R. Knickerbocker
Copyright, 1942, by Chicago Sun

From a New Zealand Port, Feb. 9. United States naval forces have arrived in New Zealand and Admiral Herbert Fairfax Leary, newly appointed chief of the Anzac command, has taken over to secure this left wing of the American front against the Japanese.

From eight to nine million New Zealanders and Australians today felt for the first time the supporting hand of America and thrilled to the assurance that no matter how bitter their trials may be, in the long run victory is guaranteed.

Knickerbocker

A great chain of United States and Allied islands across the Pacific has been reinforced and fortified and it now may be asserted that American forces have established an uninterrupted line of transportation from factories at home to the battle front of Asia.

It has been my privilege to observe the establishment of this line over the expanse of this greatest of all oceans. Maintenance of this connection between our shores and the fighting front in Asia will be the deciding factor in the war in the East, it is felt here, while on the contrary, it will be a vital matter for the Japanese to try to break it.

I came into this New Zealand harbor with the first American naval vessel to reach these waters since the Japanese attempt of December 7 to destroy the United States fleet at Pearl Harbor.

The arrival of the first United States forces in the Antipodes was such an important event, so fraught with meaning for the Allied cause that the captain of our destroyer resolved to make the style of his entry correspond to the occasion.

British and Australian naval men commented admiringly as they saw our sleek little vessel whip into the harbor at 22 knots, her sides gleaming with fresh battle-blue paint, her Stars and Stripes crackling in a stiff breeze and showing gloriously

By Harold Guard
United Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Feb. 9.—Imperial defenders of Singapore battled shoulder to shoulder today in a do-or-die stand against a Japanese invasion army filtering through the western jungle of the island and at 6 p. m. a military spokesman said that the situation still was uncertain but that "our troops appear to be holding their own."

Brief bursts of artillery fire shook the ground while the spokesman was talking and occasional Japanese planes roared overhead. The spokesman revealed that the Japanese landings were made "in some strength" during the night on a stretch of the northwest coast about 5000 yards long.

The enemy was aided by intense darkness—it was the blackest night in weeks—and was screened by a heavy artillery bombardment, which destroyed some of the British searchlight positions, and by waves of dive-bombing planes.

Invasion Barges Used

Some of the Japanese came in specially-built steel invasion barges, it was indicated. Observers said they could hear British machinegun bullets bouncing off steel shields on the barges behind which the enemy troops apparently were crouching.

During today, the spokesman said, there were no reports of new Japanese landings on the northwest coast or anywhere else on this island.

(The Tokyo radio claimed Japanese troops had advanced under protection of heavy artillery fire to within 9 miles of the city of Singapore, on the south shore of the island, after occupying the Tengan Airdrome.)

Japanese dive bombers attacked a number of British positions during today, the spokesman said, adding it was understood that one Red Cross hospital, which was plainly marked on its roof, suffered a direct hit.

May Try for Causeway

The Japanese landings were made chiefly along the inlets where Kranji and Breni Creeks flow into the strait of Johore, just west of the partly destroyed causeway which connects Singapore Island with the Sultanate of Johore to the northward, it was said.

"In the fighting area," the communique added, "British, Indian and

President Asks 22.8 Billions For Army

7-Million-Man Force Sought; War's Cost Now at 138 Billions

By Cecil B. Dickson

President Roosevelt yesterday boosted the war program to a new record figure of 138 billion dollars in asking Congress for emergency Army and Maritime Commission appropriations aggregating nearly 27 billion dollars.

Specifically, the Chief Executive asked $22,888,901,900 for the War Department and $3,852,000,000 for the Maritime Commission in cash and contractual authority.

The money for the Army is to provide equipment for a seven-million-man armed force. Within a few days, Mr. Roosevelt will ask for more than ten billion dollars additional for pay and housing of the new big Army, which will push the program to the 150 billion dollar figure, officials disclosed.

Wide latitude in the disposal of the guns, tanks and other equipment to England, Russia, China and the Dutch Indies, as well as our co-belligerents in the Western Hemisphere, was asked by the President in a special communication to Congress.

The request is in addition to the regular 1943 Army supply bill, estimates for which are now being revised by the War Department.

The figure also is in addition to the recently enacted $12,555,000,000 bill, providing for 33,000 planes for the Air Corps, which is to be increased to two million men.

Congress recently appropriated $26,500,000,000, providing 25,000 new planes for the Navy and funds for construction of the two-ocean

Spring Drive On Gibraltar, Suez Forecast

Nazis Would Time Attacks to Coincide With Big Jap Push

By Drew Middleton.
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 9.—A great spring offensive by the Axis to capture Suez and Gibraltar was predicted today by informed military experts.

The object would be to deprive the United Nations of two of the major bases on which Allied strategy rests.

Attacks by the German armies would be timed to coincide with the maximum Japanese effort against Singapore and Burma, in a vast pincer operation to hem considerable British forces in India.

Reinforcements either from Britain or the United States would be difficult because of the dearth of shipping forced by the spread of the war.

Nevertheless if the Germans aim another drive through Turkey or around the northern shore of the Black Sea through the oil-rich Caucasus, military experts said reinforcements of American, British or Russian troops must be found.

They pointed out that Axis success against Gibraltar, Suez and Singapore would leave the Panama Canal, Pearl Harbor and the British Isles as the next objectives of the German war plan, rewritten in view of the successful Russian resistance.

These sources were confident that the German army in Libya could be checked at the Egyptian border or before. They warned that when this occurred, the Germans would try to find another way around. The military experts said they believed Germany would attack

Treasury May Ask Debt Limit Repeal

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday, "In the not too distant future I will ask Congress to increase the debt limit to at least 110 billion dollars and perhaps to remove it altogether."

Morgenthau pointed out at a press conference that the Federal debt already is up to $60,284,184,254, and is rapidly approaching the 65-billion-dollar limit.

The Secretary added that this Friday he would borrow $1,500,000,000 through the sale of securities. He discussed this financing with Federal Reserve officials this afternoon.

The second important diplomatic appointment since the United States entered the war, it will place a military man in a post of high strategic importance, as did the first. Patrick J. Hurley, when he was nominated last month to be a brigadier general, also was named minister to New Zealand.

In the period since Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhart left Moscow, to become Ambassador to Turkey, United States negotiations with the Soviet have been largely through another military man, Maj. Gen. # Japs Strike First Blow at Batavia

Fighter Planes Machine Gun Java's Capital

By the United Press

Batavia, Feb. 9.—Japanese fighter planes darted from the clouds today, machine-gunned streets in the center of the Netherlands Indies capital and attacked two outlying airports, but were dispersed by a withering antiaircraft barrage from the harbor which shot down one and possibly two planes.

It was the first air raid of the war on this city of 500,000 persons and for all its ruthlessness there were only 114 casualties—two seriously and nine slightly wounded.

Another air raid alert signal sounded at 8 p. m. but no planes appeared.

There were six or eight planes in the raiding squadron, all identified as the Mitsubishi "Navy O" type. They mount two cannons, two to four machine guns, attain speeds of 350 miles an hour and now are known to carry extra, detachable gasoline tanks which probably enable them to operate against Java frmo captured bases in Borneo and Celebes, 500 to 700 miles away.

Japanese planes also attacked the important airdrome at Palembang, Sumatra, again, and Japanese invasion forces were reported pushing south from the captured east Borneo oil port of Balikpapan in an apparent land drive against Bandjermassin, a large port only 300 miles from the Soerabaja naval base. All these activities, according to the Aneta News Agency, point toward an early and all-out invasion of Java.

The Batavia raiders struck first at the Kemajoran airdrome, outside the city. They swooped low, caused some damage to grounded military planes and to two passenger planes with machine-gun fire. Antiaircraft guns opened fire and Dutch pursuit planes took to the air.

The Tjilitan airdrome, 5 miles outside the city, was attacked next. There were no reports of damage there. A suburban district and areas in the heart of the city were machine-gunned as the planes passed, headed for Tandjong Priok, Batavia's harbor. The harbor's guns, however, threw up a curtain of fire that kept the planes from their objectives.

The planes dropped no bombs, and evidently carried none, using their lifting power to haul extra fuel.

Meantinme, it was reported from Soerabaja that 51 persons were killed, 52 seriously wounded and two slightly wounded in Sunday's raid there. The largest number of casualties, according to Aneta, occurred when a bomb hit a trolley car under which the victims had sought cover. Nine planes raided the city for an hour and a half, concentrating on the naval establishments but causing surprisingly little damage, Aneta said.

Aneta reported from Macassar, capital of Celebes that all women had been evacuated in expectation of an invasion, and that transport facilities had been sharply curtailed.

London Forms Pacific Area War Council

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 9.—The government announced tonight the creation of a Pacific council composed of British, Australian, New Zealand and Netherlands representatives who will meet tomorrow and apparently act in concert with the military committee in Washington.

Representation in the council to deal with war problems will be on a "ministerial plane," the announcement said, and added that "other ministers and advisers will attend as necessary." Prime Minister Churchill will preside at tomorrow's session.

Explaining the absence of the United States from the council's membership, a highly placed informant said tonight the Washington Government had expressed no desire to be represented, "since Britain and the United States realize their collaboration is so close that this was not necessary."

Both the London and Washington governments, he said, agreed that the fewer members on such a council the better.

The council, it was said, not only would be an advisory body but could take executive action "on subjects within the scope of the governments represented" and that on subjects involving other governments they would be consulted.

"There is no question of the American view not being represented" in the new body, the parliamentary correspondent of the British Press Association said, "as this will be coordinated with British and dominion views by the committee in Washington."

Prime Minister Curtin of Australia announced in Canberra this morning that the council had been created. Australian dispatches said the arrangement falls short of original Australian proposals which envisaged a Pacific war council set up in Washington where it could maintain direct contact with the chiefs of staff committee.

British Return To Offensive In Desert

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Feb. 9.—Their desert lines finally stabilized after a 250-mile retreat, the British returned to offensive tactics today by sending out mobile columns to probe the area west of Ain El Gazala and about El Mechili.

The swiftly shifting forces of the British engaged infantry and artillery units as far as 12 miles west of Ain El Gazala and 52 miles west of Tobruk, said today's communique.

Other patrols were reported active in the El Mechili area, 60 miles southwest of Tobruk in the vital crossroads area which guards the short cut to the British rear as well as the German rear.

The R. A. F. maintained its steady attacks on Rommel's forces, blasting at his drawn-out communication lines all the way back to Tripoli.

Alexandria was raided last night for the first time in five months, but the interior ministry said only four bombs were dropped and these caused no casualties and practically no damage. (The Italian communique said hits were scored on important military objectives.)

Striking blows at submarine bases from which the Germans have been attempting to break up the British Fleet's blockade of the Libyan coast, the R. A. F. made a long-range attack on Salamis, near Athens, Greece, blasting the naval dockyard, munitions factories and submarine wharves, and also started fires at Menidi airdrome near Athens.

Torpedo planes also hit two Axis merchantmen on the Axis supply line across the Mediterranean.

The raid on Tripoli resulted in three hits on shipping in the harbor despite a newly developed smoke screen put up by the Italians, the R. A. F. communique said.

Americans Bag 101st Plane Over Burma

By the Associated Press

Rangoon, Feb. 9.—The 101st aerial combat victory for the American volunteer group over Burma was confirmed today, and afield it appeared that the British, aided by Chinese and Indian reinforcements, had stabilized their front along the Salween River and still were holding the Japanese invaders in check some 100 miles short of their major objective of Rangoon.

A communique from imperial headquarters mentioned no change in the position along the Salween and made it clear that British forces not only were breaking the invaders' attempt to force crossings in heavy force, but still occupied the east bank in the Paan area about 30 miles north of fallen Moulmein.

Enemy bombing attacks on the Paan positions were reported, along with an exchange of small-arms fire.

Proof that the American "Flying Tigers" had gone beyond the 100 mark in shooting down Japanese raiders came in the discovery of a smashed bomber which Robert Keeton, of Manzanola, Colo., had attacked February 3 without being certain of the results he had obtained.

Keeton, a former Colorado College fullback, who had left a naval bombing patrol assignment at San Diego to join the A. V. G., bagged his 101st plane in a spectacular flight.

At an up-country flying field during a Japanese raid, Keeton took up a Tomahawk plane with the main intention of saving it. Cruising at high altitude without helmet or oxygen equipment, he had to descend to avoid losing consciousness.

Streaking downward, he spotted a remaining Japanese bomber, on which he opened fire with all his guns.

During the day, Bob Neale, of Seattle, took command of an A. V. G. squadron in succession to R. J. Sandell, of San Antonio, who was killed two days ago in an accidental crash.

The A. V. G.'s irrepressibility is typified by the insignia just designed for the first pursuit group. It shows a modern Eve chasing Adam.

Japs Claim Crossing

Tokyo (from Japanese broadcast), Feb. 9 (AP).—The Tokyo radio reported tonight that Japanese forces in Burma made a new crossing of the Salween River and "now are advancing westward toward Rangoon."

Standley Named Envoy to Russia

don Naval Conferences.

Last fall, as a member of the lend-lease delegation to Moscow, Standley met Josef Stalin, with whom he will deal directly to a great extent as United States Ambassador.

His most recent service to his country was a member of the commission, headed by Associate Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, which investigated responsibility for the disaster at Pearl Harbor December 7.

Since his retirement as chief of naval operations in January, 1937, Admiral Standley continued the fight for a United States Navy built to treaty strength which he had advocated during his active service. He frequently declared that this Nation's best insurance against involvement in war was a powerful fleet.

After the start of the war in Europe, he made his voice heard again, urging that the United States give all possible aid to Great Britain. In August, 1940, he asked that decommissioned American destroyers be given to Britain to help protect her shipping and in July last year, he proposed use of the United States Navy to assist the British.

His pleas for action went further than that. In June, 1940, before the fall of France, he signed a public appeal for the United States to enter the war against Germany. Then, in October, 1940, he urged that this country declare war immediately on the Axis.

'Situation in Hand,' Singapore Says

Australian troops and some Chinese volunteers are combing the countryside for Japanese."

It was believed the Japanese would try to extend their positions on the north coast to include hte causeway, which crosses the Johore Strait to the Japanese-held town of Johore Bahru, and would attempt to repair the great bridge.

"Offensive action has been taken to mope up the enemy," an earlier communique had said, after announcing that the Japanese had swarmed across Johore Strait in force during the night under cover of the most intensive artillery bombardment of the Malayan war.

The ferocity of the onslaught admittedly pushed back the imperial troops in some forward sectors of the 10-mile front curving around the northwestern bulge of Singapore Island, 15 miles from the City of Singapore, and some enemy infiltration eastward was acknowledged.

The Japanese air force backed up the invasion with one of its most savage assaults of the 10-day siege, but paid dearly for its efforts. Royal Air Force fighters shot down or crippled 19 raiders—three certainly destroyed, three more probably, and 13 damaged. Not a single British fighter was lost.

The Japanese launched the invasion in the midnight hours, after a climactic artillery barrage concentrated on imperial positions and searchlights along the shore.

For more than three hours the Japanese guns across the strait had thundered, and even before the official disclosure persons in Singapore city had speculated whether the din heralded an invasion attempt.

The Japanese crossed the strait, at low tide shallow and hardly an imposing barrier for a good swimmer, in numbers of small craft which were believed to have been brought overland to the tip of Malaya. But British patrols a few days ago reported hearing the sound of hammering, possibly signifying the construction of the invasion craft during the lull after the imperial withdrawal from the mainland.

The landing followed the usual Japanese pattern and the defense forces promptly carried out their prearranged plan of shortening the line while forward sorties carried out delaying actions.

The invasion sector was manned by contingents of all the imperial forces garrisoning the island, most of them already wise in the ways of Japanese tactics. The latest bulwark in that sector was a contingent of Chinese volunteers who took up battle positions Sunday.

Japs Claim Airport On Singapore Isle

Tanks Are Landed And Pursue British Inland, Tokyo Says

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), Feb. 9.—Japanese forces commanded by Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita in a full scale assault on Singapore Island were reported tonight to have captured Tengah airport, one of their first objectives, 10 miles northwest of Singapore City.

British forces are fleeing along the island roads toward Singapore's suburbs closely pursued by Japanese troops and newly landed tank units, Domei dispatches said.

Other forces which penetrated deeply in the northwest part of the island were reported by Domei to be attacking from the rear the British positions which had been arranged to defend the Singapore end of the Johore Bahru causeway, breached when the British withdrew into the island.

Navy Base Attacked

The naval base on the north shore also was reported under attack, and three gun emplacements and pillboxes captured near the mouth of the Kranji River, just west of the causeway.

"The Japanese full-dress offensive against the mighty British Far Eastern base got under way with a thunderous start late last night when Japanese batteries mounted on the north shore suddenly cut loose with a withering, continuous barrage, paving the way for the landing operations," said the Domei correspondent.

The first indication to watchers that the advance detachments were in contact with the island came at 12:16 a. m. when a green flare shot skyward, he said. Four minutes later a red flare signaled completion of the first landing operations, and 9 minutes later came signals from other forces which had completed landings at another place.

Oil Tanks Reported Hit

"Since the early morning of February 5 the roar of Japanese gunfire had continued to become fiercer and fiercer and reached its pitch early yesterday morning, while waves of Army planes roared over Singapore raining high explosives and defying an intense enemy antiaircraft barrage," the correspondent wrote.

Twenty-eight out of 38 oil tanks were set aflame, and their spouting columns of black smoke and fire further menaced the defenders, estimated at only 20,000 men, the dispatch said.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi, reporting from the Philippines, declared today that a mass air raid destroyed 15 American artillery batteries and a large number of tanks and supply depots on Bataan Peninsula.

Waichow Retaken

Chinese Drive Enemy Back On Canton

By International News Service

Chungking, Feb. 9. — Chinese troops have recaptured the important South China highway junction of Waichow after losing it to the Japanese last week, and have resumed their advance on the Canton-Kowloon railway, an official communique announced tonight.

After suffering more than 1000 casualties, the Japanese were declared to be retreating toward Canton.

While recovering Waichow the Chinese troops, according to the communique, once more seized Poklo, across the East River. The town is 10 miles northwest of Waichow and had also been taken by the Japanese last week in a reinforced counteroffensive out of Canton, 80 miles west of Waichow.

Retrievement of Poklo protected the Chinese right flank for the renewed push on the vital Canton-Kowloon railway which is Japan's main troop and supply artery down to the enemy-captured island stronghold of Hongkong.

From Waichow the Chinese had less than 40 miles to cover in their effort to reach and cut the Canton-Kowloon line at Sheklung where the railway bends eastward and slants down the eastern side of the Pearl River estuary to Kowloon, situated on the mainland opposite Hongkong.

On the central front, meanwhile, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops have resumed vigorous counterattacks in northern Anhwei Province, north of the Yangtze River, the communique related.

The Chinese were declared to have driven back into the outskirts of Nangching, which the Japanese had seized last Friday following three days of fighting.

Bitter combats were reported raging on the town's outskirts as the Chineese struck energetically to recover positions west of the Tientsin-Fukow railway.

tinguished Service Cross for repeated acts of bravery in dangerous positions. He has personally been at the firing line many times, setting an example by his coolness and competence.

He won't discuss that but he will talk about the Filipino troops.

"These Filipino boys are toughening into real soldiers," he said. "With 40,000 trained troops—either Filipinos or Americans—we'd chase the Japanese right into the China Sea."

Sitting in the dark, officers talk about sniping. Nearly all of them have had narrow escapes from snipers who nearly always ignore Filipino troops and aim at American officers. They also wait until there is other firing nearby to cover the sound of their shots.

Col. Frank Nelson, of Gen. Wainwright's staff, provides a cot, plenty of blankets and shares his shelter tent. He gives me a command car next morning to take me to the battle area.

I turn into a narrow road sloping to a point where a Japanese landing party of about 300 men was cornered many days ago and are now battling against annihilation.

Bearded Capt. Horace Greeley's command post is a box of hand grenades and a tall tree with telephone communications.

Capt. C. A. Crome's outpost is 300 yards ahead.

American tank guns and 50-caliber machine guns are firing intermittently, and now and then I hear an inoffensive crack of a Japanese rifle.

Brig. Gen. Clinton A. Pierce limps in with a boot on one foot and a toeless shoe on the other. A sniper shot off his toe. He wears a tin hat.

Capt. Greeley advised him not to go down yet, but Gen. Pierce sets off and Nat Floyd, of the New York Times, and I follow, reaching Capt. Crome's outpost just as the tanks arrive. The crews drink thirstily from their canteens, light cigarettes and report that the majority of the trapped Japanese are dead in their foxholes and trenches.

A few survivors were driven to the cliffs.

Crome's troops surrounded and captured some Japanese along with grenades, rifles, machine guns and land mines.

In the brush around us, soldiers lie back with their rifles ready watching the trees for snipers.

With Pierce, Floyd and I walked into the littered battlefield and began inspecting corpses. Two shots from a sniper crack and pass overhead. Floyd remarks to Pierce:

"Sir, you're the second brigadier general I've almost had shot from under me in the last two days."

We look at the torn bodies of husky Japanese farmers, fishermen and factory workers while American soldiers search for documents and diaries containing military information.

The horror of the scene finally drives Floyd and me away.

Roosevelt Vetoes Foreign Agents Bill

Asks Omission of 'Unnecessary' Restrictions On Representatives of Friendly Nations

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed legislation tightening restrictions on foreign agents and asked Congress to omit "unnecessary, inappropriate and onerous" limitations on free exchange of representatives between this Government and friendly powers.

The bill, which recently passed Congress after a pitched fight over attempts to compel registration of members of the Communist Party and Bundists, amended the 1938 law to require all foreign agents to label their political propaganda, and generally stiffened regulations.

The President said the bill, which turned over to the Justice Department registration of foreign agents now handled by the State Department, should grant broad discretionary powers to the Attorney General in administering the act.

War Changed Situation, He Says

Drafted in peacetime, he said it obviously did not meet the situation arising since outbreak of hostilities with the Axis, requiring active cooperation with the other United Nations.

"To achieve victory we must be certain that there is a minimum of interference with the strengthening and perfecting of joint action," the President said. "Active collaboration of a military or economic nature with friendly countries requires the fullest and most constant exchange of representatives between us."

The bill, which in its registration requirements failed to separate representatives of the United Nations from its broad regulation of foreign agents, will be reconsidered by the House Judiciary Committee, Chairman Hatton W. Sumners said.

Representative Martin Dies, of Texas, who led an unsuccessful House fight to include the Communist Party and bund organizations by name, and force registration of their membership, had written Attorney General Biddle that their registration was nonetheless required.

Dies Gives His Opinion

In defeating his amendment, the House received assurances that these groups, though unnamed, would have to register under its terms, Dies said he wrote Biddle.

The chairman of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities said he thought this construction was a factor in the veto—"they still have the idea that we've got to play along with the Communists."

Representative Sumners disagreed. He said the President's message made clear that the President had in mind no one country but all 25 of the United Nations when he said, "we must do everything we can to facilitate their functioning with us in the common cause."

The period in which 900,000 enemy aliens in 40 States must apply for certificates of identification started yesterday and ends February 28. Penalty for failure to apply is interment for the duration. In eight Western States, yesterday was the final day applications from enemy aliens will be received.

Letter Giving Pearl Harbor Data Figures in N. Y. Spy Trial

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 9.—A letter containing many details about the defenses of Pearl Harbor and the Island of Oahu which, the writer said, "will be of interest mostly to our yellow allies," was found in the effects of a man described by the Government as a German master spy, Federal agents testified today.

The man was identified as Capt. Ulrich Von Der Osten, who arrived in San Francisco from Japan and China early in 1941, and was killed in a Times Square taxicab accident months later. He traveled on a Spanish passport as Julio Lopez.

A photographic enlargement of the letter, undated and written on the stationery of an American President liner, was displayed to a Federal court jury sitting in the trial of six men and a woman on charges of espionage conspiracy.

The letter referred to "strong concentration of troops of all kinds" asserted questioning "can't be done too openly" because of the presence of FBI officers on Oahu, and told how many naval units were reportedly in Pearl Harbor and the rest of the island.

"This will be of interest mostly to our yellow allies," the letter said. "Are you interested? Might be good idea to dispatch observer if you are. Want me to find somebody?

"Seems to be still better to send somebody to Puerto Rico. Fellow-passenger lieutenant commander been there in December, says about P. R. garrison up now 12,000, of whom 5000 Army. Improvements cost up to now 50 million dollars."

One Government witness today was Dinnies von der Osten, of Denver, who is under detention as an enemy alien and who identified himself as Ulrich von der Osten's brother.

He said he saw his brother, then an officer on the German army general staff, in Germany in 1937 and had received a letter from him, signed Lopez, which he destroyed.

Last March, the witness said, he saw his brother in both Denver and New York, but "I told him not to tell me his business, I didn't want to know."

High Schools Check Students' Teeth

About 1000 Washington high school students received dental examinations by Public Health Department officials yesterday in the first dental survey ever made of senior high school students, it was announced by Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, director of dental services.

The survey, ordered last Wednesday by the Board of Education, started at Woodrow Wilson High School. It will cover 11 high schools and about 19,000 students, and will take about 20 days to complete.

Dental defects uncovered by the examination will be reported to parents, with the recommendation that they be treated by family dentists. In the case of needy children, the department's dental clinic, with the aid of Georgetown University and George Washington University dental schools, will do the work.

It is intended that each school's health council shall follow up every student's case to see that the necessary work has been done.

Nation Shifts With Ease To War Time

The Nation and its Capital stole a march on Father Time yesterday, and the populace fast accustomed itself to War Time.

But like the sun above, the Naval Observatory, official timekeeper of the United States, and the Weather Bureau were unable to acclimate themselves completely.

The observatory's timepieces, precision mechanisms stowed away in airtight vaults under constant temperature, remained on "peace time" as did the observatory time signals. But receivers of the time signals need perform only the simplest of calculations if they want War Time. And office clocks at the observatory were set ahead an hour, like clocks throughout the country.

The Weather Bureau kept its delicate recording instruments on the old time so that readings could be compared with previous figures, but all official data now is given out in War Time.

The first day of fast time, adopted to conserve electricity by making all possible use of daylight hours, found trains, buses and airplanes catching up the hour some of them lost when 2 a. m. peace time became 3 a. m. War Time.

By last night, the station master reported, all train arrivals at Union Station were up to War Time schedule. All planes and practically all buses likewise were reported operating puncutally on the new time.

Since the sun didn't come up here until 8:07 a. m. War Time—an hour later than it would have risen under the old time—many workers found it necessary to dress and eat breakfast by electric light, and the first traffic rushes were illuminated by auto and street lights instead of the sun.

However, what electricity was consumed by this necessity was more than balanced, according to War Time theorists, by an hour of added daylight for homecoming and earlier-to-bed habits. The sun set at 6:38 p. m. War Time.

MacArthur Presidential Boom Cheered in House

A suggestion that Gen. Douglas MacArthur "would make a wonderful President for the United States of America" drew a burst of applause yesterday in the House.

It was made by Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who referred to the commander of the United States' forces in the Philippines as "the finest leader the United Nations have."

Burned Out Normandie Rests on Mud

Disaster units from every New York City Hospital—many of them only recently set up to cope with possible air raids—were organized at the liner's Fiftieth Street pier to care for the injured.

The fire reached five-alarm proportions after its discovery at 2:30 p. m. All of the exquisite French furnings and objects d'art had been removed since the United States took over the ship last December 12.

A strong wind swept the river's edge as firemen fought in 33 degree weather.

Fireboats had some difficulty in reaching the uppermost parts of the ship's blazing superstructure and the dense smoke at times obscured the whole 1029-foot length of the Normandie from shore watchers.

Most of the 1500 civilian workmen, 400 sailors and 300 Coast Guardsmen aboard were able to scramble to safety down gangplanks and ladders, some of which were hastily rigged to accommodate them. A warning sounded through the ship's loudspeaker system enabled 20 welders working on boilers at the bottom of the vessel to reach safety.

Among the vanguard of hundreds of firefighters to reach the stricken Ship was Mayor LaGuardia, who seldom misses a fire and who had cut short a radio speech to go to the scene.

Tied up at its French Line pier since a few days after France entered the war on September 3, 1939, the giant Normandie has been a fixture of the New York scene, viewed by thousands daily from the elevated highway which skirts her mooring place.

She was a proud ship when she first touched New York Harbor June 3, 1935, after having broken all transatlantic speed records, later to drop the title to the British Queen Mary.

All during the dark days of France's fall, in the spring of 1940, the Normandie, for which the French people had sacrificed greatly, stood majestically in the Hudson River—a symbol for all to see of the France that was.

All through those early days of the war her black and gray streamlined exterior and bright red funnels brightened a harbor which saw few vessels wearing other than the dark paint of war.

Only after the United States entered the war were the Normandie's bright colors darkened for naval auxiliary purposes.

30 Sirens Set Up For Washington

42 horns and 41 sirens, centrally operated. The horns will constitute the primary warning system; the sirens will be used until the horns are set up or if the horns should fail. Priority difficulties are holding up delivery of the horns.

To make certain that each of the sirens can be reached and set into operation quickly, a number of the sirens installed in school buildings have been placed under control of the police instead of air raid wardens.

Twenty-four-hour telephone switchboard service at the schools, maintained by teachers and wardens, has been discontinued. Instead, at the request of the District Commissioners, Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly has ordered police stations prepared to rush a policeman to each of the siren-located schools upon receipt of a warning flash from police headquarters.

The ranking station clerk will be responsible for the key to the school and prompt dispatch of a policeman to set off the siren. Police will be taught the quickest way of reaching the sirens in the dark buildings.

The police will be charged with operating the sirens only after school hours until the central siren control can be organized.

An Australian naval vessel welcomed us with a fanfare of bugles and all its men lined the rails to give a cheer for the first token to be seen here of those immense resources of men and material from the United States which are confidently counted upon to overwhelm the enemy who now is revelling in temporary success.

For me it was the end of a 9000-mile journey which had lasted two months and had taken me by installments from Washington by air to San Diego, Calif., thence by Army transport to Honolulu under convoy and thence by aircraft carrier across the mid-Pacific to a point two days' sailing from the American island of Samoa.

At that point I was transferred by a breeches buoy to the destroyer which put me down on the beach at Tutuila, the United States base on Pago Pago, overnight. Later it picked me up and carried me for five adventurous days farther on my journey to the Asiatic battlefront. Every stage of this journey was filled with varied excitements.

Once the Army transport carrying me to Honolulu was disturbed by the boom of depth charges dropped by one of our attendant destroyers upon sighting evidence of the presence of one of those enemy submarines which were threatening our West coast.

Aboard the aircraft carrier every moment was charged with the imminence of action. These carriers contain, many authorities believe, the secret of the eventual outcome of this war. Published lists show we have seven in commission and 11 have been under order sinc 1940.

When our 18 carriers are in service we shall have floating landing fields to accommodate around 1500 planes, compared with an estimated Japanese total accommodations for around 700 to 800 planes. This, it is believed in the long run may establish that naval and air superiority which will defeat Japan and her Axis partners.

So in truth America's destiny rests to a large degree upon those who man our plane carriers, laboring without surcease on a day and night vigil.

The program for the day begins two hours before daylight. We steamed ahead in absolute darkness, relieved only by starlight.

On our bow and stern, to port and starboard beam, we could discern only the blurred silhouettes of the ships which hover ever close to the protecting mother carrier and in turn protect her.

All night long 60 pairs of eyes peared without pause from every lookout post of our ship. These lookouts and the screen of our companion ships kept us safe throughout the night and from daylight on our own airmen took over the principal protection of our convoy from surprise attack.

At 3:55, a full hour before dawn, the airmen are called. By 5 a. m. they are through breakfast and ready for action, and at that hour the shrill piping of a boatswain's whistle sounds through the address system.

The hoarse, peremptory order of the quartermaster roared in the ears of all, "Up, all hands." Automatically our feet swung from our bunks and hit the floor in a fast trot. We dressed on the run for the wardroom. There was just time for a cup of coffee before the general call to quarters signaled every man aboard to take battle station.

My post was the very topmost part of topside, 129 steps high. The last few feet of this climb were finished breathlessly, but by that time a cool breeze had lashed the last trace of sleep from our eyes and as we clambered through the hatch and stood on the deck of the "sky control" we looked upon one of the few romantic aspects of this mechanized war.

Dim forms loom nearby and familiar voices speak from gray faces. These officers of the watch are gray faced partly because the light is still only that shed by the stars and partly because they are so tired that the blood has faded from their countenances.

They have stood watch four hours on and four hours off ever since the war began, and that is very hard work indeed. They never get enough sleep. The American people should know that their Navy is not only fighting for them, but is working for them with a devotion and expenditure of energy which can only be compared with the duty performed by soldiers in the front-line trenches.

But the Navy works harder than soldiers, since nearly every man on a ship has some technical job to perform in addition to his battle duties.

By unspoken agreement we all await the dawn. The Southern Cross blazes dead ahead, while the Big Dipper points astern to the North Star and the firmament is bright with an infinity which makes our little war seem microscopic indeed.

Suddenly a voice magnified to gigantic proportions sounds throughout the ship. In a flash, the stars resume their remote position in the scheme of things and men's business of war takes possession of our thoughts at the harsh order: "Stand by to start engine."

Far below us the flight deck shows in dim outline against the ink-black sea and now hundreds of shadowy figures flit in and out along its length, appearing and disappearing among the massed aircraft. A few minutes later the voice again shouts, short and imperative: "Start engines," and at once the before-dawn silence is shattered by 30,000 explosions and the dusky surface of the flight deck is lighted by scores of pale yellow-blue and green flares leaping from the exhausts of motors.

Along the eastern horizon a glow of pearl rims the ocean. The stars fade, weaker ones disappear. The Southern Cross stands faintly alone and on the flight deck planes taxi into position for a takeoff. The light now shows the yellow helmet of the principal plane director as he stands by the right wing of the first plane, his left fist clenched on high, his right hand holding a tiny brown checked flag.

He flutters his little flag, the pilot revs his engine until it screams and, with a forward diving motion, ducking beneath the plane's wing, the plane director points dramatically at the bow of the flight deck. The plane crawls, howls, speeds and in the teeth of the wind leaps toward the lightening sky. The last hurrying plane catches the first gleam of the sun and its wings shed a shower of gold. The dawn patrol has met the dawn.

Once I flew with them in the center seat of a bomber and for nearly five hours cruised far from sight of the fleet, roaming high and wide to scout for enemy ships. We saw none, but scores of miles out we met companion planes and traveled within touching distance, signaling by Morse code with our hands.

Then we had some target practice and watched our machine guns send sprays of tracer bullets bouncing and ricocheting across the white caps. Landing on a carrier's deck, which looks so hazardous to an observer from the deck or the sky control, was as easy as stepping from a curb down to the street.

through Turkey only as a last resort since such an invasion would alienate millions of Moslems in Africa and Asia.

The Turkish army, reequipped since 1939, is now viewed as considerably stronger than in April, 1941, when Germany's first eastern thrust sent panzer divisions to within 100 miles of Istanbul.

An attack on Gibraltar probably would be a prolonged air and artillery bombardment from Africa rather than a full-dress land offensive through Spain, informed circles predicted. They said the Germans would attempt to render Gibraltar useless as a naval base without a costly assault.

Despite the recent German-inspired rioting in Tangier against the British, diplomatic sources viewed Anglo-Spanish relations as improved. The situation in Spanish Morocco was being weighed carefully. Britons remember reports in 1939 that the Germans built gun emplacements west of Ceuta.

fense from the Cavite shore have been located and attacked by counter-battery fire from our forts. Several direct hits were observed and some of the enemy batteries were silenced.

Heavy infantry fighting occurred intermittently at various points in Bataan. The enemy made several attempts at penetration and infiltration. All attacks were repulsed by our troops.

2. Hostile dive bombers were active over our lines. There is nothing to report from other areas.

7-Million-Man Army Funds Asked

Navy and 1790 auxiliary vessels. President Roosevelt signed the bill yesterday.

With the new requests for the Army and the Maritime Commission, the President's war budget of $56,000,000,000, submitted to Congress on January 7, is raised to $65,760,000,000. This is exclusive of the $3,500,000,000 for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to finance the building of new rubber and airplane plants and the new billion-dollar War Damage Insurance Corporation.

Until January 1, the war program aggregated 72 billion dollars including Lend-Lease and RFC loans.

Funds For New Plants

Of the total of the new estimate, $13,252,200,000 is for ordnance and supplies of the Army, including 920 million dollars for building new arms and munitions plants, indicating that the Army plans huge outlays for big guns.

In addition, $3,011,512,000 is for expediting procurement of equipment and supplies. This fund will be used to expand tank and gun factories.

Indicating that a huge movement of armed forces is contemplated, Mr. Roosevelt asked for $2,245,701,000 for transportation.

For subsistence of the Army he requested, $145,830,000; for regular supplies, $67,982,000; clothing and equipage, $928,928,000, and $2,725,900 for horses and draft and pack animals. Thus, use of cavalry and horse-drawn artillery is expected in this modern war.

Signal Service Funds Asked

For the Signal Service, $1,349,000,000 was asked. This shows that the Army is planning to improve and increase its devices for spotting enemy planes on the far-flung war fronts and at home.

Only $167,440,000 was allotted to the Air Corps, since the $12,555,000,000 bill, recently enacted, was devoted to that branch of the service, which is to be increased to two million men. There was a request for $288,336,000 for the Chemical Warfare Service.

Exactly $1,226,300,000 was asked for the Army Engineer Service. The engineers will be in charge of developing means for the Army invasion forces, such as landing barges and pontoon bridges.

Other items include $171,178,000 for the medical and hospital department, and $31,769,000 for seacoast defenses.

Mr. Roosevelt also asked that the present limitation of 5 per cent of the appropriations that might be transferred from one branch to another be increased to 25 per cent to give him a further leeway in allocating funds.

Laura Ingalls Got Nazi Embassy Cash, Her Lawyer Admits

Admitting that Miss Ingalls was opposed to aid to Britain and that she had approached the German Embassy with offers of help, Reilly said these offers were made only to gain favor with the Germans, so that Miss Ingalls could carry on her own independent investigation.

Reilly conceded that Miss Ingalls got $250 from Baron von Gienath and that he sent her another $150 by telegraph, through Miss Kraus.

The trial of Miss Ingalls is expected to take most of the week. As it began, there were these other developments in the broad campaign against the Axis propaganda machine:

1. Special Prosecutors Edward J. Hickey, jr., and William Power Maloney announced that the special grand jury would hear three witnesses today. One will be Prescott Dennett, alleged Washington operative for the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, who goes on trial next Monday. The other two were not named. Also called for today is Representative Hamilton Fish, but Fish told The Post last night that it was "problematical" whether he would appear. When asked about radio reports that he got Attorney General Biddle to let him off, Fish replied, "that is a serious charge against the Attorney General." He said any statement would have to come from Biddle.

2. Ralp Townsend, Scribner's Commentator writer, two other Americans and one Japanese pleaded not guilty before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough to charges of criminal conspiracy and failing to register as agents of Japan. Special Prosecutors Albert E. Arent and Arthur S. Caldwell agreed to the Americans being freed on $5000 bond. The Japanese, Tsutomu Obana, was jailed to await trial.

Miss Ingalls appeared for trial in a smart tweed skirt with fur-collared coat to match. Her jacket was a soft, brown wool and her turban-like hat was trimmed across the front with a wide fur band which blended with the gray locks in her hair, which she wore in a shoulder-length bob.

It took more than two hours to impanel the jury. Throughout, Miss Ingalls conferred frequently with her lawyer. When talesmen said they would be prejudiced, Miss Ingalls grimaced.

First Government witness was Dr. I. Daniel Shorell, New York plastic surgeon. Cautioned to disclose nothing that was told him in confidence as a medical man, Dr. Shorell testified that Miss Ingalls consulted hi min March, 1941. He said she assumed another name when she went to Wickersham Hospital for an operation. This, said the surgeon, was not unusual.

Once, when she called on him, he said, Miss Ingalls wore a silver swastika on her wrist.

Dr. Shorell said Miss Ingalls spoke German well and conversed in that language because she did not wish to be overheard by nurses at the hospital.

Farm Bloc Moves For 110% Parity

Deadlock Broken

Compromise Bill Offered For Jobless

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Compromise legislation to pay unemployment benefits and training wages to displaced workers while their industries are converted to war use yesterday was introduced in the House by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Culminating a long fight between State officials, who feared "Federalization" of their unemployment compensation systems, and the Federal Security Administration, which denied that was proposed, the Doughton bill broke the deadlock, but failed to end the row.

Hearings on the measure, authorizing a 300-million-dollar Federal appropriation to supplement unemployment payments by the States, were set for tomorrow by Doughton. He withheld commitments on the pending bill, which is subject to committee revision.

U. S. Adds 20% to Benefit

The compromise measure adds 20 per cent from the Federal Government to the unemployment benefit paid displaced workers by the States, with the Federal Government guaranteeing the full amount for a maximum period of 26 weeks.

To meet Federalization charges aimed at the original Administration measure, the bill specifies it must not be construed as an attempt toward a uniform national system of unemployment insurance. State forces still contended it was the "opening wedge."

The original bill would have operated indirectly to tie up the unemployment funds of those States which did not cooperate fully with the Federal program.

Tiding-Over Measure

Directed mainly at relief of automobile and other workers thrown temporarily out of work while their plants are retooled for plane, tank and gun construction, the benefits would tide over a reservoir of skilled workmen until they can be trained for new jobs, or allow for their transfer to plants in other cities requiring defense labor.

The President originally called originally for a minimum $24 weekly benefit, or 60 per cent of the worker's former wage, whichever was higher. The new bill's flat addition of 20 per cent to the State unemployment compensation payment, would make possible a $24 benefit in States now paying as high as $20 a week. Where a State now pays benefits for less than 26 weeks, the Federal Government would assure the full payment from the end of the State period to the 26-week maximum.

Nye Joint Resolution Is Aimed Against Price Rise Prevention

A new farm bloc move to reach 110 per cent of parity farm levels outlined in the Price Control Act was launched yesterday in a resolution by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota.

The Nye joint resolution, introduced in the Senate, stipulates that no Federal official or agency "shall exercise any authority or perform any function in such a manner as is likely to prevent, or with the purpose or intent of preventing, the price of any agricultural commodity from increasing to the parity price or 110 per cent thereof."

The resolution likewise forbids any action to reduce farm commodities below parity. In its preamble, the Nye measure asserts "there is evidence of an intention by various officers and agencies in the executive branch of the Government by manipulative practices and otherwise to prevent the prices of farm commodities from reaching or being maintained at parity levels or 110 per cent thereof."

A resolution jointly sponsored yesterday by Senators Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, and Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, would prohibit the Commodity Credit Corporation from making crop sales below parity.

The nomination of Leon Henderson to the $12,000 a year post as price administrator was speedily confirmed yesterday by the Senate after it had been favorably reported by the Banking Committee.

Although farm Senators have been bitterly critical of Henderson on frequent occasions, not a word of debate preceded the Senate approval of his appointment.

The President's Day

By International News Service

MOVING DAY: For some time the President has been working thoughtfully on some important moving, shifting his kingpins and best bets around for the most potent possible wartime arrangement. Yesterday he decided on big moves which set two of his brightest naval men to the head of the stairs. For the big job in Moscow he put the finger on Rear Admiral William H. Standley.

SEA CZAR: To the big post of absolute authority on all U. S. shipping, Mr. Roosevelt moved peppery, direct-actionist Admiral Emory S. Land.

BACK FOR REPAIRS: Back to Congress for considerable repairs went a bill designed to tighten up alien registration and dissemination of propaganda. Along with the veto the President sent an explanation saying the bill would be embarrassing and burdensome to the representatives of the far flung United Nations. The Commander in Chief also sent a message asking Congress to proceed full speed ahead on touching up the Neutrality Act a little so that U. S. can have financial transactions with some of our newly acquired cobelligerents.

CONSULTANT TO CHINA: The President called in Maj. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, an old infantry man, and with unusual ability to speak, read and write Chinese. Stilwell will be sent off to China to sit in with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek on military consultations.

HEROIC GREECE: At noon Greek Minister Cimon Diamantopoulos went solemnly in to deliver to the President the latest reports on the situation in Greece at his King's direction. Minister Diamantopoulos found Mr. Roosevelt keenly aware of the tragedy of Greece, "the appalling situation prevailing in my starving country."

PINS AND NEEDLES: Just before lunchtime bustling David Dubinsky, the ladies garment workers boss, dipped in and out of the Executive offices on an unrevealed mission . . . The plot outline for the next pins and needles production, maybe.

WAR PLANES: While the President lunched, Secretary Grace Tully took dictation and made a valiant attempt to divert phone calls long enough to get some of the paper work out of the way. After an hour of combining sandwiches and dictating, the President went back to the major problems of war, shuttled back and forth between map room and the special phones that lead directly to his commanders.

HUDDLE: Midafternoon, Mr. Roosevelt summoned his military and diplomatic powerhouses for an all-important war plans huddle.

NIGHT CONFERENCE: Leaving the office at his regular quitting time of around 6:30 p. m., the President went over to the house, had a relaxing dip in the pool and a quiet dinner before a long evening of heavy mental slugging.

Credit Aids Asked for Allies

Copyright, 1942, by Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to repeal the credit provisions of the Neutrality Act to permit cobelligerent nations, which have not defaulted on their bonds to the United States, to sell securities in the United States.

Repeal of the provisions will make it possible for American nationals to extend credit for goods purchased, however, to nations such as Great Britain, which are in default in obligations to the United States Government.

It will permit Canada, Australia, China, the Netherlands, and other countries, which have met their obligations, to sell bonds or other securities in this country.

President Roosevelt made the request in order to facilitate trade with Canada and Great Britain, according to Chairman Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Connally said he would sponsor the legislation and that he foresaw no substantial opposition.

The Johnson Act, which bars the selling of bonds of governments in default to the United States Government and to American citizens, is untouched by the President's proposal. Also, enemy nations in default are barred from any credit in this country under the trading with the enemy act.

In his message to Congress, President Roosevelt said:

"Section 7 (of the Neutrality Act), now in effect, prevents essential financial transactions between persons within the United States and our cobelligerents. In my opinion, there was never any intention that this section should operate during our belligerency. I hope that the Congress will act promptly in this matter to legalize transactions essential in the effective prosecution of the war."

Henderson Opposes $1-a-Day Pay Boosts

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Price Administrator Leon Henderson has written President Roosevelt that he flatly opposes a C. I. O. union objective of general $1 a day wage boosts throughout the war industries, and has advised the National War Labor Board against granting substantial pay increase demands, it was learned last night.

Disturbed lest a general drive for increased wages touch off an inflationary spiral and prevent the stabilization of prices he is charged by law to achieve, Henderson wrote the President that C. I. O. wage demands against the General Motors Corporation and in "Little Steel" would have disastrous results, it was disclosed.

The President read the memorandum to the joint C. I. O.-A. F. of L. "peace" representatives who met at the White House last Friday. It was said to have provoked extensive argument among the union delegates, who contended that rising costs were outstripping real wages and that payroll increases were justified to keep the situation in balance.

Labor Board Hears Henderson

Henderson's admonition to the War Labor Board was delivered the same day, it was learned, when he was invited to appear before a meeting of the full body.

Although it was explained that the price czar did not ask the labor board to refuse all wage increase demands, he was reported to have pointed out the inflationary consequences of general payroll rises.

Henderson's position, it was said, was that wage increases to groups already well paid would have the effect of penalizing the consumers and low income groups by forcing general price increases.

To the contention of union labor that wage rises can be taken out of profits, Henderson is said to have replied that the Treasury has a claim on these earnings, and that the general objective in the present situation is to reduce, rather than increase, the purchasing power level.

Henderson Against Sales Tax

Henderson is said to advocate several methods of withdrawing funds that are flowing into the purchasing power pool. The first is increased taxes, particularly on personal income and corporate profits. He also suggested the possibility of "sterilizing" wage increases, if they were found to be necessary, by paying them in defense bonds and stamps, it was reported.

The price administrator was pictured as vigorously opposed to suggestions of "blotting up" excess purchasing power by the sales tax method.

Although Henderson has no direct control or authority over wages, the new Price Control Act charges other Government agencies dealing with wages "to work toward a stabilization of prices, fair and equitable wages, and the cost of production." Thus it was believed that these Federal bodies—notably the armed services and the National War Labor Board—are obliged to give the most careful consideration to Henderson's proposals.

Several Suggestions

In this process, the NWLB was seen as playing a key role, particularly since the C. I. O. Steel Workers Union demand for one dollar a day wage increases in Bethlehem and Republic Steel companies is pending for board determination. Traditionally, wage trends in the steel industry have served as a pattern for changes throughout the rest of the country's factories.

It is known that among suggestions made to board members is the possibility of granting wage increases in the Little Steel case, and of "sterlizing" them by ordering that they be paid in defense bonds. Chief objection, however, is the fact that the board has no authority to take equivalent action with respect to increased dividend payments. There is also a question, in the light of the Price Act's declaration to stabilize production costs, whether the board may order any wage increases in this industry.

It was freely admitted yesterday in board quarters that the "Little Steel" determination will probably set the course of future board decisions on a mounting number of union disputes, all centered on the wage issue. These cases are appearing on the board docket in increasing number, while the summaries of the War Production Board labor division show a marked rise in the number of management-labor disputes now under negotiation throughout the country.

Porter Sought In $966 Theft

Police last night were looking for Harold Elmer Williams, 36-year-old Negro who left a Peoples Drug Store at 10 a. m. yesterday with $966 intended for deposit in a nearby bank but never arrived at his destination.

The store, at 604 Ninth Street Northwest, said the man, who was employed as a porter, gave his address as 1419 H Street Northeast when he went to work there about four months ago. Investigation revealed yesterday, however, that he had never resided at that place.

When he left the store, Williams had instructions to deposit the money in the Security Savings & Commercial Bank at Ninth and G Streets Northwest. A warrant for his arrest charges him with larceny after trust.

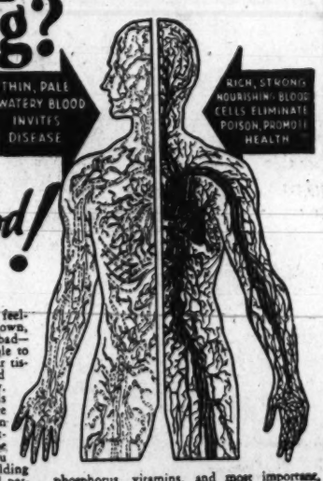
Is Thin Pale "Watery" Blood Keeping You Weak and Ailing?

THIS NO COST TEST PROVES IN 9 DAYS YOU CAN BUILD UP

Rich Red Fighting Blood!



No wonder you wake up in the morning feeling tired, that you lack energy, are rundown, always sick, complexion poor, digestion bad—if your blood is pale, wish-washy, unable to provide strength and nourishment to your tissues. Everyone knows good rich blood is important, but few people know why. Doctors will tell you that your blood is the most important organ of your entire body...that every minute, thousands upon thousands of red blood cells are circulating through your veins, performing the most vitally important job of keeping you alive. In addition to providing body-building elements so every tissue cell, your blood performs an important operation, acting as a carrier for oxygen from your lungs. Every day, millions and millions of body tissue cells are destroyed, repaired and rebuilt, and it is the oxygen in your blood that makes this possible. When body cells are destroyed, it is the blood that carries away the refuse, the toxic wastes. No wonder it is important to have rich red healthy blood.

What Makes Red Blood?

Many elements combine to give you nourishing red blood. Protein fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts, such as iron and copper, calcium, phosphorus, vitamins, and most important, mysterious blood-making elements which are found most generously in raw liver. Ordinary food provides many of these elements, but the most important ones are frequently insufficiently provided in your daily diet. After years of research, however, a way has been found to combine these important blood-making elements in small pleasant-tasting tablets known as Boncquet Tablets, which contain Red Blood Cell Maturing Factors (raw liver principle); Vegetable (Organic) iron and other minerals derived from vegetables especially fertilized and grown to insure a high natural vitamin and mineral content; Vitamin B complex which contains all the vitamins fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G; easily assimilable calcium and phosphorus. These amazingly effective blood-builders, devised and manufactured with painstaking care and with the utmost scientific accuracy, have produced results which, to doctors and clinics, have proven startling.

9 Day Test

In 9 days, Boncquet Tablets must show a sizable improvement in the quality of your blood, the way you look and feel, in renewed strength and energy, or the trial is free. Countless scientifically taken blood tests and clinical examinations have proven that in a few short weeks, it is possible for virtually anyone to increase the red blood cell count in your body by millions. Boncquet Tablets are absolutely harmless, have no ill after effects, can be taken with any other treatment, and remember, you don't risk a penny in trying it. Get Boncquet Tablets today.

OCD Voted Cash, Warned Of Inquiry

a WPA out of OCD. The move is up to her."

Representative Taber elaborated this thought on the floor by declaring, "There is an outfit in the OCD that is doing a lot of things beyond the pale of the law, which in substance says OCD is to provide facilities, supplies and services for the adequate protection of persons and property from bombing attacks and sabotage."

"After Congress passed the law and the President signed it, why should we have extra-legal activities in the OCD?" he continued. "If the Congress is to set up a WPA writers' project and dancers' project and actors' project in OCD let them go before the Committee on Military Affairs and ask for a new statute. I'm opposed to the boondoggling now in vogue."

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, told reporters in New York that he had blocked the assignment of Miss Chaney to the morale division of civilian defense in New York last December.

Asked why Miss Chaney was selected for the job of directing children's activities in preference to some teacher trained in recreational work, Mrs. Roosevelt said the dancer had "more contacts among the people who would be called upon to work with the volunteers."

Also, the First Lady said, Miss Chaney came to OCD with a plan and program already worked out. This program was discussed and agreed upon and then the officer of the Budget Bureau assigned to OCD was asked to classify the job she would hold. It was decided it was a $4600 position. Mrs. Roosevelt said she did not recommend the dancer for the job, but that she asked John B. Kelly, head of the physical fitness division, to see her. She had nothing to do with the Melvyn Douglas appointment, she said.

Arising in the House to pay tribute to Mrs. Roosevelt and the Office of Civilian Defense was Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, who declared the First Lady has "done more for womanhood in this country than any other woman in my generation" and assailed her colleagues for their ignorance in thinking Melvyn Douglas was being paid $8000.

"He is working without compensation, but from what has been said on the floor it would seem he is making a salary," Mrs. Norton said, terming his action in volunteering for the OCD job a good example of the type of patriotism needed.

The screen star announced in a statement Sunday he will serve OCD without pay. Dean Landis at a press conference last week announcing the Douglas appointment said certainly he would be paid something—at least traveling expenses and the Government subsistence pay of $10 per diem. The following day, when The Post checked salaries for Miss Chaney and other recent OCD appointments, it was said a basic salary of $8000 had been decided upon for the star. He would be paid on an A. W. E.—or actually when employed—basis, it was said then, and draw $22.22 for each day worked.

Representative Meyer (Democrat), of Maryland, declared both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to be generally beloved—but said he could not "love them half so much loved I not Maryland more." He said the OCD furore had placed Congress in an "unfortunate position."

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, declared he thought calling a vote on the amendment voicing criticism of "fan dancing and the like" to be perfectly meaningless and "a gratuitious uing at one of the officials of OCD, and I do not think that was a very nice thing to do."

Also, he made a plea for the Treasury allotment for movies, declaring not a cent of money is going into "any high pressure advertising such as characterized the Liberty Bond sales."

Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, said he considered the OCD was going far afield when it attempted to provide amusement for the people.

Senator Sheridan Downey (Democrat), of California, defended the selection of Douglas on the Senate floor, asserting the movie star was "sacrificing a fabulous income" to serve the Government.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, declared "boondogglers and fancy uplifters should stand aside." He charged that "those who have been trying to make over this country" were taking advantage of the war to accomplish their aims.

At the Office of Civilian Defense, Corrington Gill—long associated with WPA but now administrative assistant in charge of OCD operations—was asked if he would explain whether there was any attempt to "make the OCD into a WPA project," as charged on the House floor.

Gill declared he could not make statements nor give interviews on the subject, that Dean Landis would have to do that.

'What a Day!' First Lady Says

velt rallied quickly and answered—or refused to answer—question after question. It was probably her liveliest press conference to date, and when it was ended, she exclaimed, "Whew, what a day!"

Asked whether the President had "talked to her about civilian defense," the First Lady replied that he had other things to do and assured the conference that when he got ready to talk about it, it would be with her "bosses." Director F. H. LaGuardia and Dean James M. Landis—not with her.

When the conference veered to controversial subjects or to questions having to do with administration, Mrs. Roosevelt referred her questioners to Dean Landis or declared she did not want to answer until she had had a chance to talk first to Congressmen who have been criticizing her program.

Most of the questions were asked by women, even after the men arrived and some of the latter declared they were scared and had "pulled our punches." What some of them had not known until yesterday morning was that the First Lady is as adept at answering questions or withholding information she wishes withheld as they possibly could be at asking even punch questions.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she would be in New York today when Naval Lieut. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., is operated on for appendicitis, and also will visit him tomorrow.

She said her son had had several attacks while on active duty at sea and the operation had been decided upon now "because they don't have doctors on destroyers."

Japanese bombs have damaged United States consular premises in Singapore, but 24 Americans remaining in the foreign colony are unhurt, the State Department said yesterday.

The amount of damage was not disclosed. Word of the bombing was received from U. S. Consul General Kenneth S. Patton who said all Americans were given an opportunity to leave Singapore for places of safety.

He reported that only 24 remain "who in full knowledge of the gravity of the military situation, have decided to stay there on their own responsibility."

LANSBURGH'S

Land Made Czar Of War Shipping

By James G. Simonds.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

President Roosevelt acted yesterday to insure the most efficient possible use of all seagoing American vessels in the war effort by creating a War Shipping Administration headed by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission. The administration will have sweeping powers to control the "operation, purchase, charter or requisition" of any vessel under American control for the duration of the war.

Creation of the agency was followed by an announcement that the President had requested $3,852,000,000 more from Congress to expand the Nation's merchant fleet.

The President's executive order setting up WSA gave Admiral Land authority to regulate not only American flagships, but all such vessels as might be temporarily under American control. The only ships he will not control will be those belonging to the Army, the Navy or the Coast Guard, and such coastwise and inland shipping as may be regulated by Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation.

Gets Priorities

Admiral Land will receive schedules from Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, giving him the priority rating for the overseas transportation of essential war supplies destined for use of the American armed forces or for the Allies, as well as for cargoes connected with American civilian economy.

Another of his duties, the executive order stated, will be to "represent the United States Government in dealing with the British ministry of war transport and with similar shipping agencies of nations allied with the United States in the prosecution of the war, in matters related to the use of shipping."

For nearly a year the Maritime Commission has been keeping a close check on the availability of all American shipping in commission and under construction. The new administration will take over this work and furnish on request such information for use by the Army, the Navy or any other Federal agency concerned with the import of war materials and commodities.

Admiral Land will transfer to the new agency as many of the personnel and the records of the commission as he feels will be necessary to carry on the war work. The executive order also gave him authority to use the personnel or facilities of any other Government department engaged in shipping work or related activities.

The broad wording of the executive order made it apparent that practically the whole of the machinery of the Maritime Commission would be transferred to the Administration for the duration of the war.

Admiral Land will have control of more than 11 million deadweight tons of shipping, while other vessels will be added to this pool as ships provided for in the additional building programs come off the ways. At present, some 18 million more deadweight tons are scheduled to be completed by the end of 1943.

Misunderstood, Murphy Tells House Probers

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

Anybody want Lieut. Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan to recommend him for a job paying from $1000 to $3000 a month?

The chances the Governor would oblige—provided the applicant is a resident of Michigan—would seem to be excellent in view of his testimony yesterday before the Faddis Committee in the House, which has made quite a record for itself by investigating defense brokers. Murphy is not related to Justice Frank Murphy, a former Governor of Michigan.

The Governor, clothed immaculately in morning coat and striped trousers, testified that he accompanied a gentleman whom he had met, he said, on two previous occasions, to the offices of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., Muskegon, Mich., where the matter of the gentleman's employment for the purpose of expediting war orders was discussed with company officials.

"I suggested that they pay the man $1000 a month as salary and expenses," Murphy said.

Engel Starts Probe

There was no thought in his mind, he said, about such things as the exercise of political influence. Nor was any consideration given to the possibility, as suggested by Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, that there was to be any division of salary between him and the gentleman in question, Edgar T. Clapp, of Detroit, who identified himself to the committee as "contact man, representative or salesman."

Company officials, S. B. Withington, general works manager, and E. E. Widdis, general plant superintendent, took a different view of the tenor of their conversation with Murphy and Clapp.

Murphy, said Withington, "felt he could do us some good in Washington through his contacts, but that he would have to be employed by us."

It was possible, said Murphy, that Withington misunderstood him. Murphy told the committee that he "distinctly referred" to Clapp and not himself, and that he advised the official that the way to "be sure the man is right is (to) put him on the payroll; don't put him on commission."

Withington said he inquired about the rate of compensation and was told that inasmuch as the contemplated employment would involve moving to Washington with family, it would cost between $2000 and $3000 per month "for expenses."

Admits $2000 Talk

Murphy admitted that the sum of $2000 did enter the conversation, but this, he said, related to Clapp. As for influence, he said, "The only influence I might have would be the influence of my office as lieutenant governor of Michigan."

Withington explained that the firm was "not interested in a proposition of this kind or anything like it."

Murphy said he met Clapp in January, 1941, during the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, committee chairman, asked at the close of the hearing what, if anything, the committee proposed to do in the case, replied:

"We're not a jury. We make no findings."

In the Rough...

Neither the pilot nor his lone passenger was injured yesterday morning when a North American trainer from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia made a forced landing in trees on the Anacostia golf course. The plane had just taken off from the air station when the motor cut out, press attaches at the Navy Department said. Maj. R. D. Salmon, U. S. M. C., was at the controls of the ship with Technical Sergt. W. R. Marshall as his passenger. The plane, a Marine craft, suffered damage described by the Navy Department as "considerable." The emergency rescue squad was called to the scene of the mishap but its services weren't needed—both occupants of the plane being able to leave the wreckage under their own power

Artists Eager To Vie for Poster Prizes

The Washington Post "Salvage for Victory Campaign," in cooperation with the District Salvage Committee, has begun to receive enthusiastic response from Washington area artists eager to use their talent in the war on waste, which will help with the war on the Axis.

Three classes are open in the competition. Class A is for a general poster (size 14 by 20 inches), carrying first prize of a $50 defense bond, a second prize of a $25 bond. Class B, a transit ad poster (size 11 by 28 inches) has a first prize of $50 defense bond and a second of $25, while Class C, emblem design (size 12 by 12 inches) offers a $25 defense bond prize.

"Lying idle in attics, back yards and cellars are potential guns and cartridges, possibly even a light tank or two and important parts of great bombing planes," Horace Walker, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Salvage Committee said yesterday in explaining what the contest competitors have to work on.

The contest will be concluded on January 28, after which judges appointed by The Post and the salvage committee will announce the winners.

The Nation must have raw material to turn into weapons, Walker said. Many such materials can be produced from what generally is called waste and scrap, such as can be found in cellars and attics—a real condition which can be described artistically on posters, said Walker. The posters will bring the story to the public.

What the artists may visualize are old wash pails and buckets, galvanized wire, tin roofing, chunks of old metal, waste paper—and materials that can be translated into war equipment. To spur the average citizen into salvage work is the objective.

Citizens' Groups Back 'Salvage for Victory'

The Burleith and Piney Branch Citizens Associations, at separate meetings last night, indorsed the District "Salvage for Victory" campaign.

Joseph M. Viener, scrap dealer, explained the workings of the salvage program to the Piney Branch group. Ernest C. Gup presided.

Burleith members witnessed a motion picture provided by the British Press Service showing London during an air raid.

66 Defense Demolition Squads Set Up

Establishment of 66 demolition squads in various sections of Washington was announced yesterday by the Civilian Defense Council.

A total of 22 zones has been set up and the program will be under the supervision of Stanford Abel, wrecking company officials and Anthony J. Scullen, dean of the school of engineering at Catholic University.

Each zone will have three squads with headquarters at various school buildings. A foreman, 4 carpenters and 10 laborers will form each squad. The Central Labor Union will provide the laborers.

The supervisors and their assistants will take their oaths tomorrow at 8:30 p. m., at Woodrow Wilson High Schol.

At the same time yesterday, Commissioner John Russell Young, United States Defense Coordinator, announced that he hoped to obtain money from the 100-million-dollar Office of Civilian Defense fund for necessary local emergency projects.

"Mayor LaGuardia," said Young, "has assured the District it would receive some of the fund."

Young suggested that at least $25,000 might be utilized for medical and first aid services here.

U. S. Employes Boost Red Cross Fund to $328,216

Contributions from various Government departments to the Red Cross War Fund brought the total to $328,216 yesterday.

The Navy Department was the largest single contributor, with a donation of $4,061. Other Government department contributions were: War Production Board, $1862; General Accounting Office, $1093; Federal Works Agency, $925; Treasury, $428; Federal Trade Commission, $401; Commerce, $977; Panama Canal Office, $300; District Government, $109; War, $228; U. S. Compensation Commission, $207; National Archives, $330, and Securities and Exchange Commission, $52.

Other gifts included a $25 donation from Ensign John F. Kennedy, son of former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, who said that he wished to participate in the Red Cross activities in the Nation's Capital.

Mrs. Orchard to Talk On British India

British Indian economy will be discussed by Mrs. Dorothy J. Orchard at a meeting of the District of Columbia chapter of the special Libraries Association at 8 p. m. today in the Agriculture Department auditorium. The lecture will be supplemented by motion pictures taken in India.

Mrs. Orchard is collaborating with her husband, defense adviser, on a book of Chinese industrialization.

Auxiliary Police Uniform

OUTFITS ARRIVE—Raincoats, blue caps, badges, police whistles and batons for Washington's auxiliary police began arriving yesterday and were being distributed last night by Inspector Milton D. Smith (right). The equipment, enough for 1500 of the 5000 auxiliaries, will be rounded out by forthcoming shipments expected at a later date. The raincoats and badges are similar to those issued to regular police. Here Jerry O'Leary, jr., captain of auxiliary police, administrative headquarters, receives his uniform

Utilities Asked to Provide Own Guards, Relieve Police

Public utilities in the District will be asked to provide their own guards so that 52 policemen assigned to this task since December 7 may be relieved for other duties, Maj. Edward J. Kelly said last night.

Compliance with his request will be on a voluntary basis.

"These plants have got to be guarded," the police head said, after answering negatively a question as to whether the police guards would be withdrawn in the event the utilities refuse to provide their own protection.

Asignment of the 52 policemen to the utilities has been a considerable burden on the Police Department, the superintendent said, adding that the men are now urgently needed for other police work.

Park View Defense Meeting Called

Would you know what to do in you know your air raid warden or where his post is?

If you don't know the answers to these questions, and you live in the Park View area, in Zones 6, 7 and 8, attend the mass meeting at the Macfarland Junior High the event of an air raid? Would you know where to go or what necessary precautions to take? Do School, Georgia and Iowa Avenues, Thursday at 8 p. m. The above zones are bounded by Georgia Avenue, Thirteenth Street Northwest, Shepherd Street, Rock Creek Church Road and Spring Road.

Speakers from the Office of Civilian Defense will be there to explain your part in this work. It is important that all citizens in this area attend. Please tell your neighbors and friends.

Information Bureau For Draft Set Up

District Selective Service headquarters yesterday established a registration information service to assist men who must register under the Selective Service Act next Monday. Registrants desiring information should call REpublic 8100 and ask for "registration information."

Only nine simple questions will be asked of those who register, William E. Leahy, District Selective Service director, said. They are:

Name, address of residence, mailing address, telephone, age and date of birth, place of birth, name and address of person who will always know your address, employer's name and address, and place of employment or business.

Men born on or after February 17, 1897 and on or before December 31, 1921, must register if they have not already registered at either of the two previous registrations.

Southeast Group Wants Paid Wardens

The Southeast Business Men's Association adopted a resolution to recommend to the office of civilian defense that paid deputy air-raid wardens assigned to Washington defense areas.

The business men also went on record as opposing the decentralization program now being worked out by the Federal Government and stated that it was their belief that sufficient temporary buildings could be constructed in the city to preclude the necessity of removing Federal employes.

The meeting was held at the Donohoe Realty Building, 314 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

Brightwood Area To Study Bombs

Elmer Johnson, deputy warden of the Brightwood civilian defense area, will demonstrate protection against gas and incendiary bombs for sector and assistant sector wardens at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Paul Junior High School, Eighth and Oglethorpe Streets Northwest.

A dance for the area wardens and public of the Brightwood area will be held from 9 p. m. to 12 p. m. Thursday in the Brightwood Masonic Temple, Georgia and Concord Avenues Northwest.

Navy Ashore Buys Bonds To Sink Axis

With the ships of the fleet fighting in every ocean, the Navy's people in Washington are doing the next best thing—buying defense bonds heavily to keep the ships shooting.

During January, Navy Department personnel bought $168,100 worth of bonds. Navy Yard personnel swelled this with an additional outlay of $304,218. The Navy, out to set an example, will turn a heavier heat on the sales in the future, it was said yesterday.

Arrows have been painted on the corridor walls of the Navy Building, indicating the shortest approaches to the bond sales office. The office hours this week have been extended from 8 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. on weekdays, and on Saturdays from 8 a. m. to noon. When sufficient personnel has been assembled the hours of sale will be further extended in the building, it was announced.

The Treasury Department, it was stated, maintains sales hours weekdays from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., and from 9 a. m. to noon Saturdays; those formerly observed by the Navy.

Since October 1, 22 ensigns taken from Harvard University have been assigned to navy yards and stations, handling the bond sales and clearing the business through the department here. The Navy in December raised $1,700,000. The partial payment plan for men with the fleet has been inaugurated.

Sponsoring the drive, which includes the Marines and Coast Guard, are Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox; Ralph A. Bard, Assistant Secretary in charge of shore establishment; Rear Odmiral Charles Conard, coordinator for defense savings bonds; Rear Admiral Ray Spear, paymaster general of the Navy acting as fiscal agent for the Treasury, and Commander Gerald A. Eubank, assistant to Admiral Conard.

Defense Volunteers To Meet Tonight

A mass meeting of civilian defense volunteers in the downtown section of Alexandria has been called for tonight at 7:30 in the Alexandria Civil and Police Court room by Frank S. Landon, senior air raid warden for zone 4, group 1 of the city's protective warning system.

In announcing plans for the session, Landon called attention to the fact that one of the two naval torpedo factories in the Nation is located in the area for which the zone unit is responsible, and he stressed the need for haste in fully organizing the air raid warden branch of the civilian defense program.

Additional sector wardens, fire watchers and other officials in zone 4 will be appointed during the meeting.

More Police!

Washington's latest flurry of crimes points directly to the depleted police force. The city is growing at the rate of thousands of new families every month No comparable growth in the police force has yet been attained. To be sure, Congress made provision for an additional 100 policemen a few months ago. These men are now being trained, and to get them on their beats with the least possible delay under present emergency conditions, the training period has been reduced from three months to one. But this addition to the force would have been inadequate even if war had not broken out.

Since Pearl Harbor the police have had to establish special guards at bridges, public utility plants, embassies, legations and other important points. Major Kelly also had to detail 53 men to the White House. Obviously he is left critically short-handed to preserve law and order in a war Capital full of strangers. It is not surprising that criminals are taking advantage of the scarcity of patrolmen to attack women workers returning to their homes late at night. The chief responsibility for this situation falls upon officials who have been slow to give Major Kelly the men he so urgently needs.

A bill now before the House would allow an additional 100 policemen. Months ago, however, Major Kelly testified that he ought to have 350 to 400 more men. Congress should at least double the funds provided in the House bill or, better still, give the District Commissioners power to hire as many policemen as the city needs during the war emergency.

Brasshats Under Fire

Civilian criticism of Britain's brasshats is one of the healthy symptoms that British democracy is very much alive. A barrage of it is now falling on the head of the war office for the conduct of the Libyan campaign. The latest salvo comes from Sir Stafford Cripps' new weekly, the Tribune. The former British Ambassador to Moscow calls for a thorough housecleaning. He is not alone, though he is the most outspoken of the critics. And his and others' criticism may lead to a shakeup which will bring in new men who are not fettered by tradition or lack of imagination. Maybe these handicaps are not illustrated by the Libyan campaign. But other examples come to mind of war office conservatism, to say the least. There was the mild amusement with which the generals regarded the vast civilian volunteer air-raid precaution system of Britain and the unprofessional Home Guard under Capt. Tom H. Wintringham which may have saved Britain from invasion.

The civilian is always scorned by the military man for his ideas about the conduct of war. Yet he sometimes has a definite contribution to make, aside from serving (in a democracy) to shake up a hidebound and incompetent general staff. That is recognized even in Nazi Germany. The generals in Germany's army have a wholesome respect for the military genius of "the Austrian house painter," Adolf Hitler. In Russia the same story applies. By all accounts Stalin—not his generals—is responsible for the planning and the strategy of Russia's magnificent feat of arms, and is said to be without equal in knowledge of the art of war.

It was not a new discovery to find the civilian mind so preeminent. In World War I, the man who showed more military distinction than any general was the former pacifist, Mr. Lloyd George. He saw the war as an intensified clash between old forms and new forces, not a war to be run according to field service regulations. So he overrode the military on two programs which helped to win the war: organizing the country to make munitions and forcing the military to accept civilian direction of transport in France. In both cases the military leaders admitted that Lloyd George was right.

Doubtless the way was paved for the healthy respect of the Junker mind for the civilian Hitler by Germany's sad experience in World War I. Germany pitted the military man Ludendorff against the amateur Lloyd George. Thus Germany allowed herself to be dominated in both its civil and military elements by a military dictator. Yet Ludendorff had the typical narrowness of the military mind and a gambler's instinct—and these attributes brought disaster to Germany. It might have been the same if Kitchener had continued to run Britain's war. Kitchener used to give the battle of Atbara as the precedent for infantry occupying positions without artillery support—the World War I parallel for World War II experience of battleship action without air support. Thus the civilian has not only every right in a democracy to see that proven military incompetents are discarded; he has proved his worth in the actual direction of war.

Fateful Siege

After over a week's softening from the air, Singapore on Sunday met the first shock of Japanese invaders, but could not prevent them from getting a firm grip on Britain's mighty bastion. A grim and bloody battle now impends for Singapore's polyglot garrison. A dozen nationalities are fighting side by side in equatorial heat. They include the quiet men from the English counties, kilted Highlanders, bearded Sikhs, Australians from the bush country, a contingent of those dreaded Gurkhas from India who are best at the hand-to-hand fighting that is now being waged, Malayan troops, and many others. It is not said whether among them there are Americans. But the Stars and Stripes are represented by Hudson bombers and long-range Catalinas and speedy Brewster Buffalos, and maybe there are American pilots in action, too.

All these men will give a good account of themselves. For they know, as we know, that the retention of Singapore, in General Wavell's words, means the saving of Asia. To the British the great base, which offers the sole easy passage between the Pacific and the Indian Oceans, represents with Suez and Gibraltar the key to empire. The base is, of course, no longer usable. But in Japanese hands Singapore would become the forward base of the fleet of the Mikado. All the lands in its vicinity would thus be endangered. There would be an immediate blockade of Rangoon across the way from Singapore, and China would then be cut off from the United Nations. Even the peoples living beyond Burma around the bend of the Bay of Bengal into India proper would see and fear the flag of the Rising Sun. In more immediate danger would be the great barrier of islands to the south of Singapore extending to the Antipodes. Those islands would be the first to hear the reverberations of the loss of Singapore. For Singapore has hitherto been regarded as necessary to the safety of both Netherlands India and Australia. As for the United States, this country would be deprived of the trade of a dozen key materials, and its problem of conquering Japan would become enormously complicated.

These are the reasons that the beleaguered men of all nationalities will fight hard to keep Singapore for the United Nations. They have ample room for deployment in an island covering 220 square miles. The armament is powerful. To be sure, the arrangement of the guns was made on the supposition that any attack on Singapore would come from the sea. It was never thought that an invader would cut through the hot Malayan jungle and hop over the three-quarter-of-a-mile strait onto Singapore soil. But the time that the Japanese have taken to conquer the jungles seems to have been used in rearranging Singapore's armory. The world will watch the siege with bated breath, for the length of this war depends upon what happens to Singapore.

Nazi Mobility

The death in the East of Hitler's chief engineer, Major General Fritz Todt, seems to have given rise to at least two conflicting and very interesting rumors. One is that he was organizing a highway and supply service for a spring offensive against the Russians. The other is that he was superintending the construction of a German East Wall to stem the Russian advance. There is no way of checking the source of these rumors, but if they weren't started by the Germans, they ought to have been. For both rumors are admirably calculated to keep the Allies guessing about Germany's true position in the East. The confusing thing, moreover, is that General Todt could have been engaged in either of the suggested jobs.

More than any other individual he was the architect of the German military machine's vaunted mobility. He built the Nazi network of strategic highways within Germany, and after the outbreak of the war he organized and maintained the superb communications system which enabled the Nazis to consolidate their gains both in the East and the West. These accomplishments of General Todt were perhaps not as generally known as his most spectacular single achievement: the pre-war construction of Germany's West Wall, better known as the Siegfried Line. But in any case it was an open secret that the German General Staff counted heavily on his engineering versatility and on the vast organization which he headed as Reich Minister for Armament and Ammunition, Power and Water.

When, in Russia, it was no longer a question of consolidating German gains but of withdrawing with minimum material losses, General Todt's organization apparently did not function with its accustomed efficiency. A partial reason for this may have been the fact that from the start the German supply system was geared to relentless advance on a huge scale. When, as happened in Russia, the machine was thrown into reverse, the consequences were greater confusion than the Nazis had ever had to cope with, and serious material losses. So it is difficult to know whether the Nazis, in spite of General Todt's contributions, really feel as sorry about his death as they claim. In any event, the Allies should not have to wait later than spring to find out, first, whether the Nazis' major concern in the East is offense or defense, and second, whether the Nazis possess another engineering genius who can handle as successfully the mobile requirements of the German army.

Reforming The OCD

More by indirection than by anything he has actually said Mayor LaGuardia has let it be known that he is not responsible for the bitterly—and justly—criticized appointments in the Office of Civilian Defense. This, it seems to us, is a snide way of evading responsibility for the administrative mess in the OCD. The Mayor has been and still is the director of the OCD. Now that he is about to resign, he has no business dissociating himself, however indirectly, from the activities of his erstwhile administrative partner, Mrs. Roosevelt. Nor is his tack sound political strategy. For, in the first place, it makes him appear to be privately delighted to be getting out of a personally damaging situation. And, in the second place, it appears to confirm the belief of many persons that Mrs. Roosevelt has been running the OCD. It doesn't matter now who appointed Melvyn Douglas, or Mayris Chaney, or the half dozen others without whose presence the OCD could probably struggle along. What matters is that so far neither the Mayor, nor Mrs. Roosevelt, nor Mr. Landis has offered a single constructive suggestion for relieving a situation which is frankly intolerable.

This, in itself, is more damaging to the Nation's morale than all the hullabaloo raised on the floor of the House. Public confidence in the administration of the OCD is not bolstered by the threat of investigation. But it could be bolstered by a joint administrative statement of the OCD heads attesting their willingness to strip the organization of unessential details. If such action is impossible or inconsistent with their convictions, they should resign. There are others, experienced in public service, just as able, and if anything better fitted to go about the urgent business of preparing civilian defense. One thing is sure: reform of the OCD, whether from within or from without, must come. It is the only way to guarantee a restoration of public confidence, without which the OCD can never hope to function successfully.

Official Secrets

It seems pretty clear that if the code of wartime practices governing what may and what may not be printed is scrupulously administered, some publications will be censored out of existence. One such, for example, has been described by Mr. Alfred Friendly in the news columns of The Post. The January-February issue of the magazine in question contains production data some of the details of which the newspapers have refrained from publishing because publication would violate express provisions laid down by the Office of Censorship. There are a number of other journals of a technical nature which continue to publish material that is not generally available to newspaper readers. Engineers, chemists, physicists, businessmen, and others, have their trade papers or magazines. They are policed from the standpoint of revealing official secrets; nevertheless they reveal production details—details essential to their existence—which are forbidden general publication by the War Department.

Such publications are easily available to anybody who has a mind to make subversive use of them. Indeed, in ordinary times it is just such publications which are read most avidly abroad by those whose business it is to pick the brains of American scientists and technicians. That the War Department has not cracked down on their appearance in wartime may possibly be ascribed to the fact that such published material is now subject to a final and rigorous check before being sent out of the country. So published details of interest to the enemy have small chance of reaching him. But if this is the line of official reasoning, should not a similar generous interpretation of censorship rules apply to newspapers? In the interests of defense, it seems only sensible that there should be uniform application of censorship, regardless of the reader-audience.

War News

It seems to me that newspapers and newspapermen, generally, are conducting themselves in a way that serves the best interests of their country. The press, again generally speaking, is quick to point out mistakes, where open and free criticism provides the quickest and best method of correcting them; the press is contributing magnificently to the drives and appeals that are part of the national war effort; the press is sincerely striving to avoid publication of information that might aid or give comfort to the enemy.

At the same time, newspapers and newspapermen occasionally give way to that streak of cussedness that seems to be peculiar to their profession—the stubborn determination to print everything they can get their hands on. It's something that's just ingrained in them.

One Washington paper recently printed a piece about a Japanese claim that a United States general had been captured. The War Department, the story stated, would have nothing to say about it, pointing out that such information might be a tip to the enemy as to the whereabouts of the officer and his command. In parenthesis, the newspaper then went on to say that they had checked all sources here to try to verify the report, but hadn't been able to dig up anything.

In other words, the newspaper did its level best to get the information the War Department said might give aid to the enemy if revealed.

A reporter on a Washington paper boasted about his ability to dig up scoops at the War Department on matters that the officials could not give out.

It is hoped that newspapers and their men, in their aggressiveness, will not inadvertently print something that will lead to tragic consequences. The life of even one United States fighting man would be too great a price for the biggest scoop in newspaper history.

Telescope

I note with interest William A. Mason's letter printed in your issue of February 6 in which he poohpoohs, as it were, my statement in a recent Post Impressionist column that "We knew how Columbus must have felt when, on that Stygian night of October, 1492, he peered through his telescope——." Mr. Mason points out that the telescope was not invented until about 1609. At first I thought he had me; but in all fairness I think Mr. Mason should have quoted my full statement, which was: "We knew how Columbus must have felt when, on that Stygian night of October, 1942, he peered through his telescope and saw the Indians lighting matches on the island of San Salvador." Maybe the telescope hadn't been invented, but how in the name of the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria could he have seen matches that distance without a telescope? And another thing, Mr. Mason: What were the Indians doing up at 2 o'clock in the morning anyhow?

Someone Should Check

Perhaps some of the Government workers who have nothing to do could figure out how much time is wasted in the Government offices by smoking, and how many fires are started in the wastebaskets in the same offices.

Also if there is any proof of illness required from these employes to entitle them to two weeks' sick leave they all seem to take.

Mobilizing Industry

Will it take another Pearl Harbor to bring about a real reorganization of our war production program? Must we wait until the great armies of China and Russia have been knocked out of the war for lack of sufficient equipment before we admit that American industry cannot be fully mobilized by remote control from Washington?

Our present predicament ought to be all the proof we need that we have been on the wrong track from the moment of the appointment of the original industrial committee—the War Resources Board—in August, 1939. Since then we have had, in succession, the National Defense Advisory committee, the Office of Production Management, and the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, all with practically the same personnel and the same policy. Now we have the War Production Board, whose make-up is much the same as that of its predecessors, but whose policy remains to be seen.

Where do we stand now after this barrage of boards?

Our output of guns and tanks and planes is but a fraction of what we and our allies need.

Most of the war contracts have been awarded to a handful of our large firms. No war orders at all have been intrusted to most of our 184,000 manufacturing plants.

Washington has become a megalosaurian city, its body all out of proportion to its brain. The staggering and unwieldy size to which it has been swollen by the ill-considered effort to make it the industrial as well as the political capital of the Nation explains much of the confusion and congestion that have impeded war production.

The way out of our predicament is to get direction of the industrial phase of war entirely out of Washington and into the hands of the men in management and labor who have the know-how in the parts of the country where the mills are located.

Women Roomers

The Post, in trying to improve the situation between the "80 per cent women roomers and the 70 per cent of landlords and landladies who prefer men" is doing a real "war" service.

For 10 years I have lived in a nice average section of the city and rented out my upstairs room. I realize it is instinct with women roomers to make a home within a home and have tried to give them the privileges I would myself appreciate were I a roomer. But their record as a class is against them. They permit their friends to call them up so often and at such hours that I am never sure of five hours' sleep. They leave unspeakables in the bathroom, they repeatedly stop up the tub with rags and lint which requires $6 plumbing jobs to clear out, they leave poor little love birds covered with a black cloth all day, they burn the furniture with cigarettes and are extravagant and generally untidy. In contrast to nearly all of the men roomers I have had they are what would be called uncultured in the home. Yet when they go out on the street they appear like rich men's daughters.

I cite the above for a constructive reason. If The Post can instigate a program of reeducation for the modern woman roomer it will be doing excellent defense work in Washington.

Are You A Parasite?

This means: are you living in the City of Washington leisurely and keeping unnecessarily vast locales to yourself?

If so, you better pack and leave your resting rooms and the part of breathing air that you will be cheating from the toiling people, if I were you I would not wait for another suggestion even courteously made.

And after all, life in a peaceful country is not so bad. You would be surprised how fast you become a lover of nature, from the green carpet of grass to the tallest trees and the majestic beauty of our hills. You never would have believed before that there could be so many stars and such bright sun in a country sky. Your health will also improve "and this is for the ladies" a country life will permit you to keep or retain that lovely young-looking complexion without any chemical aid, cross my heart. As you see, by giving up the city you have nothing much to lose.

Now if you are industrious and interested in any activities concerning public welfare you will not get lonesome for there is plenty to be done in our small communities, where you always will be more than welcomed.

Anyway, you can snow your good sense, generously leaving space needed for defense-workers, and your patriotism by helping country folks to fight against that kind of "Japanese bug" which causes serious damage in American land every year.

Cab Drivers

It is high time that the Cab Association give their drivers some serious instructions on tire conservation and courteous driving.

Being on the streets all the time, cabbies should have learned by now that they can't "beat the lights," meaning that fast starts and burning brakes to stop for a red light that they could have stopped for by compression alone, won't get them anywhere any faster. In fact, it annoys most passengers.

Furthermore, such careless driving sets a poor example for the public. Tires are at a premium, yet cabbies burn them up as if they were plentiful.

Cabbies should know and use proper hand signals. Observance of such a simple practice will be much to their own advantage, as well as other drivers.

Just because stopping "to pick up or discharge passengers" is legal does not make it right for cabs to block several lanes of traffic at important intersections.

PRACTICAL.

Add OCD Bureaus

In the recent editorial list of new bureaus to go under Civilian Defense, two important ones have been omitted. These are the Bureau of Tea Ceremonies and the F. L. F. A most important social function among the cultured Nipponese is the ceremony of the tea, which follows an elaborate ritual and the correct performance of which is a mark of distinction. Those able to perform this ceremony are given special honors, and may even be accorded the Nipponese equivalent of Quislings in occupied territory.

The F. L. F. (pronounced Fluff) is quite new, its full title is First Lady's Friends, and, initially, it will be limited to such of the socially elite as bear the official hallmark and are in receipt of one or more honorariums before induction. This organization is rather hush-hush just now, but it is rumored that full details will be spread upon the pages of important papers in due course.

Advertising Goes Altruistic

We see by the papers, specifically those of New York City and Washington, D. C., that advertising, that long self-centered art, has since we entered the war, gone altruistic. It is more than a bit startling to the gentle reader—with small sales resistance—who, just a few weeks ago, was being urged, cajoled and even threatened into buying new tires, new linoleum, new golf balls, new electric ice boxes, new cars and so on endlessly, to pick up his favorite paper and start scanning the advertising pages, only to come on something like this, sponsored by a large Manhattan department store: "THIS IS NO TIME FOR FRILLS!" is the heading above, of all things, a photograph of a lamb chop—a single lamb chop—wearing one of those very frills for which this is no time for, simply to prove how silly a lamb chop can look that way in print and with a war going on.

"No time for frilly living, frilly thinking, or frilly buying," the department store copywriter goes on to warn the gentle reader who must be wondering by now if he should dare even to think of himself as a prospective customer. "But," the copywriter continues, "it's an uncommonly good time for common sense. It's a time for sane living—without frills. (Shame on that frilled lamb chop!)—Without, for instance, so much use of your car as you've been accustomed to. Well, the subways are the safest, most efficient rapid transit in the world."

And right here, the advertiser is to be pardoned if he slips a bit in his altruism and tells the gentle reader that two such subways run right into said advertiser's store, which isn't a bad place to come when you are following out a no-frill program.

"It's a time for sane thinking," the advertiser further insists—"and we don't mean morale. We think everyone's morale is fine and the word can be dropped from our language for the duration. But sane thinking goes even farther than morale. It is best achieved by doing something constructive and helpful. It's a time for sensible buying. You're going to—" (Bear up, gentle reader, at this one!) "make things do—buy only what you need, buy good things that will last, make every dollar do its duty. Because what you used to spend for frills will be going into defense savings stamps and bonds."

And, with the few nice words about his own particular store, the advertiser ends his little sermon.

A Washington department store heads a recent advertisement with the slogan in large letters—"Forward America! On to Victory . . . Together!" Under this is a picture of an American soldier blowing a bugle and then the gentle reader is reminded, in extra large type, that "A Call to the Colors Is a Call for Dollars." The rest of the full-page advertisement is given over to urging the gentle reader and the general public to buy defense bonds. There is no mention of what may or may not be on sale in the store that has sponsored this advertisement with the exception of the fact that defense bonds and stamps are on sale there at the credit office on the sixth floor.

To return you to Manhattan, every paper there has been carrying a series of advertisements, sponsored by another large department store that is celebrating its centennial. The first of these series was a genuinely altruistic exhortation to the American people to keep faith with the present and the future, remembering how, in the past, they had, as individuals and as a Nation, met the "five challenges" of "sickness, ignorance, poverty, drudgery and distance," overcoming each of these—proof, indeed, that the "modern challenge of aggression" can likewise be overcome.

A far cry, this sort of advertising—(if advertising it can be called, save in the sense that it advertises America, these United States, not "for sale" but as not to be sold out!)—a far cry, indeed, from the usual lists of temptingly cheap merchandise to be had in the bargain basement and on up.

But perhaps the most startling advertisement of all is that recently sponsored by rubber interests in this country—interests that, an incredibly short while ago, were urging us to discard at once our not so old tires and tubes and get us new ones. Today, those same interests head their advertisement in this manner: "For the Duration of the War, Every Ounce of Rubber Is a Sacred Trust." And, under this, is printed a "Car Owner's Creed," to be read, committed to memory and carefully taken to heart by every car owner in America. This creed, in essence, is a pledge not to drive fast and to take every precaution to avoid undue wear on tires that must be made to do—indefinitely.

Our merchants learned, long ago, that "it pays to advertise" salable merchandise and it has paid them handsomely in quick turnovers and large profits. Advertising has, by its very nature, served what might be termed selfish interests or did until the attack on Pearl Harbor. Since then, the merchants advertising in our metropolitan dailies have, as we have just seen, turned their advertising to altruistic ends. With defense priorities curtailing wholesale buying and retail selling, our so-called hard-headed businessmen have not gone in for making public their present difficulties but have, showing themselves to be wholehearted Americans, set out to advertise to the world at large America's faith in the future of democracy as expressed in every American's faith in today's America. What better advertisements could any American newspaper be printing at the present time? There is just one sentence missing in each such "ad" and that is "Totalitarian papers, please copy."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Report From Southern California

San Francisco.

From what I have seen in southern California I have the very strongest impression that the control exercised by Washington is too remote for efficiency and that some way must be found by which urgent military and civil questions can be decided on the Pacific Coast itself. I am not speaking of the general strategical planning of the great war, but of the internal and external defense of this combat area which contains the main bases and some of the principal arsenals of the Pacific war. Any one who comes here from Washington will, I believe, soon be convinced that the distance is too great, that communication is too difficult, and that the questions are often too peculiar to be dealt with by referring them back and forth between the many separate Government departments in the Capital and their many separate subordinates out here.

LIPPMANN

I MYSELF, for example, have had two personal experiences in California, trifling in themselves perhaps, which nevertheless are, I believe, illustrative. Before leaving Washington I was given permission to visit some of the important base areas on the Pacific Coast. My credentials named certain officers and their commands. The first time I used the credentials it turned out that the officer named in my papers from Washington had in fact been retired quite some time ago. No doubt this was no more than a clerical error by one bureau of one large department in Washington. But it does suggest how remote is Washington when even one bureau concerned with such matters can fail to be vividly and wholly aware of the very name of the man who commands one of the most important bases in continental United States.

My second experience was with credentials from Washington authorizing me to visit certain plants producing weapons. My Washington papers named one specific plant in southern California which I was allowed to visit. As a matter of fact, I was actually taken without papers to two plants and was invited to visit several others. There was nothing in the notion, which seemed to prevail in Washington, and involved a lot of time and paper work, that Washington really controlled who visited what plant in California.

THE ONLY POINT in mentioning these things is that they illustrate the general conclusion, which few out here would dispute, that in spite of the Roberts report on Pearl Harbor there is yet no solution in this vulnerable region of the problem of adequate authority and of unified command and of clearly fixed responsibility. I visited one base area which must be protected at all costs. Undoubtedly much has been accomplished since December 7. The Navy, and Army, the Civilian Defense, the Department of Justice, and the local Government were alert and in close and friendly relations. But my impression was that there existed no clear division of authority, much less a final over-all authority, and that in matters which might at any moment become critically dangerous, the several commanders and civilian officials on the spot were entangled in confusion theoretical, ideological, and academic discussions with officials in Washington. I was unable to feel that the officials at their desks in Washington could fully grasp the practical questions they were trying to decide, or could realize how urgent they are.

Officers and civilian officials, who may at any moment be face to face with the enemy striking from without and from within, were still corresponding with Washington about questions which call for the equipment of constitutional lawyers, international lawyers, diplomats, economists, sociologists, politicians and even journalists. Now it is inconceivable that they can put their whole minds and all their energy into protecting this base against what might be irreparable damage if they are not allowed to decide what security requires and are unable to get prompt approval or modification of their decisions from high Government authority nearer to the situation than Washington can hope to be.

WHEN ONE considers the size of the country, the complexity of this war, the many commands, the many civilian departments concerned with security, and the multiplicity of local authority, the States, the counties, the municipalities, it does not seem possible that the right measures can be taken in time by invoking the blessed words "co-ordination, cooperation, and consultation." War requires authority, command, obedience, and discipline, and to be effective these things must be exercised and enforced by men who are not too remote from the scene of action.

I do not know how it is to be done. But I am satisfied that there is needed in the Pacific Coast region not only unity of military command at the top with a direct chain of unified command to each critical position, but also a unity of civil authority, a something in the nature of a Governor-General with cabinet council entrusted with most of the war powers now lodged in Washington.

It is easy enough to think of all the reasons why this is novel and unprecedented and difficult to do. But if it is a necessary thing to do, we ought not to wait for another Pearl Harbor before doing it. Now the fact is that the Pacific Coast is an absolutely vital region both to the defensive and to the offensive power of the United States. It is very much more vulnerable than we like to realize. It is certain, I believe, that the full security of the Pacific region requires extraordinary powers, and that there is not now the necessary organization of command and administration for doing what the situation requires. Nor will there be, I submit, as long as the local military and civil responsibility is so scattered and the control from Washington is so remote, so indirect, so conflicting, so soft, yet so pervasive and inhibiting, as it now is.

THE REAL OBSTACLE to thorough measures is, it seems to me, a false perspective in Washington and to a considerable extent on the Pacific Coast as well. There is a general hesitation, about exercising powers which in effect approximate martial law, and of concentrating these powers where they can be effectively exercised. This hesitation arises from scruples, which are quite proper in time of peace, against overriding private interests, vested interests, local and departmental prerogatives.

But these hesitations will be seen in proper perspective when we take as our standard of judgment the fact that the damage done by acting promptly and drastically can be repaired while the damage which may result from inaction can be irreparable. It may be unpleasant to lock the stable door tight while the horse is still there. But it is far more unpleasant to lock it after the horse is stolen.

The rights we suspend as a precaution can be restored and the injuries, which may be considerable, can be compensated. With wisdom, humanity, and imagination it is quite possible to see to it that measures of full security inflict no irreparable damage on individuals and on private interests, no damage that cannot somehow be made good when the danger is passed. But if for lack of full measures of security we suffer an injury like that at Pearl Harbor, the damage is irreparable: The time lost and the ground lost by such a blow can be recovered only by the expenditure of thousands of lives.

Diplomatic Offensive

By John W. White

Mexico Curbs Axis

BY REFUSING to receive diplomatic agents from the European countries that have been occupied by Germany, the Mexican government has defeated a sinister Nazi diplomatic offensive by which Hitler hoped to counteract the effects of the rupture of relations between Mexico and the Axis powers. The plan was for the occupied countries to send to Mexico ministers and other diplomatic personnel whose loyalty to Berlin was unquestioned.

The occupied nations of Europe have recently required their diplomatic representatives in Mexico and other Latin-American republics to take an oath of allegiance to the new puppet governments set up by Hitler. Those who refused to take the oath were dismissed from the service. The Norwegian and Danish Ministers to Mexico resigned some time ago rather than swear allegiance to their respective puppet governments. When Norway and Sweden tried to appoint successors, Mexico refused to receive them, on the grounds that the Mexican government is maintaining satisfactory relations with the free governments of Norway, Denmark, Holland, Poland and Belgium that have been established in London.

IT IS reported in well-informed semi-official circles here that Mexico is determined to give its strongest support to these free governments as part of its contribution to the cause of democracy.

Diplomatic sources here say that the diplomatic representatives of the German-occupied countries in Argentina, Bolivia, Chile and Uruguay were recently required to take the oath of allegiance to their puppet governments and that this oath makes them agents of Hitler. They are expected to be especially valuable to the Nazis in Bolivia and Uruguay, which have severed direct diplomatic relations with the Third Reich.

The American blacklist is proving much more effective than the British in curbing the activities of Axis business firms in Mexico. It is officially reported that 200 firms on the American blacklist have ceased operations as a result of being boycotted by Mexicans. This is about half the total number of firms on the American blacklist. The British blacklist has been in effect for more than two years without, apparently, having seriously interfered with German, Italian and Japanese business. But because of the close cooperation now existing between the Mexican and United States governments, the publication of the American blacklist had an immediate effect.

SEVERAL GERMAN and Italian stores, however, are flaunting striking window displays of American merchandise as proof of their ability to get United States goods through third parties. A large German drug store on the main street of Mexico City keeps one of its large windows attractively arranged solely with popular brands of widely advertised toilet articles from the United States. A large Italian grocery store in Mexico City took everything else out of its window this week and filled it with an attractive display of New York made macaronis, spaghettis, vermicelli and similar Italian-style foodstuffs.

German, Italian and Japanese workmen are being discharged from all important industries throughout Mexico as a precaution against possible sabotage. Mexican workers are closely watching all activities of their fellow-workers who are citizens of the Axis countries because they realize that any serious act of sabotage would prejudice them as well as their employers, since they would be deprived of work. The Mexican government will assist these discharged foreigners to take up agricultural activities if they so wish, but will discourage their reemployment in mines, transportation enterprises or factories. A large group of Japanese from the Pacific coast were permitted this week to settle on farm land in the center of the republic.

On Stripping For War

THE IMPORTANCE of what happens in Washington these days can scarcely be exaggerated. For many years it has been the nerve center of America. Now it has become the headquarters of the 26 United Nations that are fighting the Axis. Nor does this mean only that Washington is the meeting place for statesmen and strategists planning the conduct of the war. It inevitably means also that what happens here will be a powerful influence upon the morale and the fighting spirit of people beyond as well as within our borders.

PUSEY

One question which officials ought to be asking themselves with the utmost seriousness, then, is this: What impressions are going out from this center of democracy to the people who must fight this world-wide war? Recently President Roosevelt suggested that "parasites" living in the Nation's Capital ought to clear out to make room for essential war workers. Many regarded that advice as a rollicking good joke. But it was not. Its seriousness was clearly implied when the President noted that he has power to take over office buildings and living quarters here for war use.

Few Washington citizens who might be placed in the "parasite" class were amused by the President's remarks. Some mothers whose sons had joined the Canadian or British forces long before Pearl Harbor are still burning with indignation at the thought that they might be regarded by their Government as useless creatures who are hindering the war effort. The Federation of Citizens Associations has solemnly protested against efforts to classify the voteless residents of Washington as "parasites" subject to eviction. It may be that the President was only trying to impress citizens with the responsibility that war gives them. But in the minds of many he created a quite different impression.

WASHINGTONIANS are already feeling the effects of war. Some have been compelled to give up their apartments. The schools are overburdened with more pupils in some areas than they can house. If school buildings are converted into temporary War Department quarters, education in the Capital will inevitably suffer. Yet, if these sacrifices prove to be necessary, they will be made with little complaint. For winning the war is more important at the moment than education, or home life, or any of the other blessings which we normally enjoy. Every citizen must expect to put aside many personal comforts and advantages until victory can be achieved.

Now one of the greatest tasks of the President is to inspire the people with the will to sacrifice for victory. He can lift them above selfish desires and make them eager to give up luxuries and even comforts in defense of the Nation. He can win their enthusiastic cooperation in every step that is necessary to put the Axis in its place. Instead he began by calling one group "parasites." If the President had spent hours thinking up ways and means of pouring cold water on the patriotic spirit, he could scarcely have produced a more effective word.

Part of the fury that has gathered about the Office of Civilian Defense can be explained by the President's blunder in asking sacrifices from "parasites" rather than "patriots." For it now appears that while President Roosevelt was suggesting that people give up their homes, Mrs. Roosevelt was giving the OCD program a ridiculous twist by adding "frills and furbelows." To be sure, the employment of a dancer friend of the President's wife is in itself a petty incident. It has raised a furor chiefly because it symbolizes the attitude with which the Administration is approaching the greatest task ever undertaken by any American Government.

THE PRESIDENT has asked the people to prepare themselves for a hard and bloody fight. He has told us frankly that there will be hardships and sacrifices. But he has not been willing to set the example in his own Administration. Think of what has happened to the automobile industry and to thousands of small businesses throughout the country that have been unable to adjust themselves to a war economy. In effect, they have been liquidated for the duration. That is no cause for complaint. Drastic measures of this sort are an absolute necessity. What we do have a right to expect, however, is that the Government will lead the way in stripping down to meet this ordeal.

Where has the Administration sacrificed anything for the war? While private industry is being put on the shelf, such agencies as the Rural Electric Administration continue to use up strategic materials, man power and valuable office space in Washington. A number of Federal agencies are in a semimoribund condition because the war has suspended their normal functions. Yet thousands of new employes are brought to Washington every month to take war jobs. Time, money and space could be saved by shifting employes from peacetime Government work to emergency positions for the duration of the war. Are such adjustments rejected only because they might encroach upon some activities in which the powers that be have special interests?

IT IS the poor example which the Government is thus setting more than the actual expense of necessary activities which has the most demoralizing effect upon a people girding themselves for war. In times like these strong, virile and disinterested leadership is imperative on the home front as well as on the battlefield. The Government must show the people the way. When it asks industry and labor to give up business as usual, it should be willing to give up bureaucracy as usual. If our industrial machinery is stripped for war, certainly our political machinery should be also.

Morale springs from the feeling that we are all working together—that we must work together—for the national interest. It could not be instilled into the people by a hundred thousand Mayris Chaneys working on preschool children. That feeling is in danger of being shattered whenever those in high authority begin to consider any group of citizens as "parasites," and the danger is intensified many fold when petty privilege and frivolity begin to creep into the serious business of mobilizing the entire national effort for war.

To set dancers and movie stars at the task of building morale is to suggest that we are a Nation of weaklings in need of frivolous diversions to keep our courage up. What we actually need more than anything else in this sphere is a clear-cut demonstration that the Administration is sufficiently in earnest about this war to strip off its excess fat and get on with the business of smashing the Axis.

Priorities Victim

The Hitchhiker is coming upon tough times. Nobody has included him high up among the sufferers from priorities, etc., but there he stands. And stands and stands.

Due to the rationing of tires and cars he will have to buy transportation or cover the country on foot. He is already feeling the pinch. People are ignoring him right now on the ground he is an extra load on the tires if for no other reason.

Joe ("The Grin") Boffle, a national officer of the Federation of Hitchhikers, discussed the crisis sadly today. "The business is shot," he declares. "We hitchhikers have got to get back to traveling the hard way. The old personality stuff don't work, and, as for a mere thumber with no charm, no chance!

"The days when a car rolled along every 10 or 15 seconds are over for the duration. And the cars that are left on the road are loaded before they leave the garage.

"Who ever thought the hitchhikers would have their whole pattern of life changed by happenings in a Malay jungle? We spent years developing a smile, a technique and manner, and now it's gone with the wind. All I hope is that nobody starts rationing bunion plasters."

Mr. Boffle was quite depressed. Another victim of priorities on tires and cars is Luther the Outdoor Lothario. The car that was to him indispensable romance is in the all-out war. Necking has already been cut 48 per cent in this country since Pearl Harbor.

You can see the difference any moonlight night. The old parking spots are not what they used to be in peace time. And if the war lasts Luther says it may be necessary to get a permit to neck.

"Where's the great hardship?" we asked. "Why not court indoors?"

"It's okay by me," said Luther, "but the girls don't like it. Two generations have come up in the era of outdoor romance and the present-day girl don't believe there ever was a time when a courtship could be developed indoors, and with no odor of gasoline.

"She thinks love is linked up with a parking problem. You would be surprised how uncomfortable she is when having a boy friend in her own home. I brought along a pair of headlights and strapped 'em to the front of the sofa the other night and she felt better, but still unhappy.

"But her old man is on my side. And know what he's going to do? He's going to put an old sedan body on the sofa with a steering wheel attached. And he's going to fix it so the lights in the parlor can be dimmed by pressing a button."

Glamour Preferred

The OCD must have some help
For all the things we're cooking,
So pick some aids at once, but first
Make certain they're good looking.

We plan activities quite vast—
The crisis is alarming—
So get a key man right away,
And see that he is charming.

The job's a grim and bitter one;
It calls for planning wisely;
So pick assistants right away

Individuals With No Voice

DISCUSSING A SHORTAGE of skilled men for the war trades, the personnel man of one of the big motor companies, who deals in workers by the thousand head, remarked that a smaller company had appealed to him for help. The little company needed machinists and without them could not deliver on time the mechanism which was its allotted task in the whole armament scheme.

PEGLER

"They begged me," he said, "to lend them 300 of my men."

A half hour later the personnel man's boss, discussing another phase of production, remarked with a note of reproach, that the big unions claim men for their own as though the men were property. The more men they control through their closed shop and check-off agreements, the greater the power of the boss unioneers over both the men and industry. If they call them out no strike they can be impersonal toward the privations of families because the individuals are not men to them in the human sense but just so many critters, with no voice in the matter. The successful organizing strike, a common device, called for the purpose of driving into the union X-thousand more men employed at an unorganized plant, who desperately don't want to join, increases the power of the union boss and the strikers go hungry with their families and obey orders with little complaint.

WHEN THE BOSS had explored this thought I said the personnel man's talk of lending the machinists had revealed a similar impersonality and sense of property in men, although not the same brutality. I believe we all agreed that the industry did think of workers by the drove or herd, subject to loan.

The boss of the great corporation, an old-time shopworker, himself, then said the downrightest feudalism in this country existed in the baseball business where the man is, frankly, just property on the hoof. He did not say, but I often did when I was doing sport, that this serfdom was the very foundation of the amusement which for more than 40 years has been regarded as the national game of the freest country on earth. Twenty years ago the standard baseball contract was attacked in court but it must have been upheld because it is still the standard form. Briefly once a player signs, he becomes property and may be sold and must work for his next owner at the owner's terms but, growing old or being hurt, may be fired on ten days' notice. He is scheduled as property of a certain value in his owner's assets and tax reports. The owner can claim depreciation on the player as his talent and sinews decline, but the player, being, for his own tax purposes, a man, can claim no such depreciation. The player can't solicit a better job and the owners have a written conspiracy, with penalties provided, whereby no owner may approach another owner's player with an offer of a better job.

A FEW YEARS ago cases were reported from the low minors in which one player was taken in trade for a bird dog and another for a satchel of new and used baseballs.

Some employers using masses of men prefer to do business with the unioneers. They agree on wages, hours and conditions and the union very efficiently delivers the labor at the gates on time, of a fair average skill and reasonably sound of wind and limb.

Dave Beck, the Seattle teamsters' unioneer, startled me once by exclaiming angrily of the brewery drivers, "Those men belong to me." He meant that his union claimed jurisdiction but he said, "Those men belong to me," and he meant that, too.

Last Saturday, the Chicago Daily News, which belongs to Col. Frank Knox, discussed national conscription of civilians for work and soothingly remarked that a Gallup Poll "shows that a majority of our citizens are willing, in the war emergency, to let the Government tell the worker 'what job, where and how much.'"

What do you think of that?

W. & M. Marks Its 249th Year

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 9 (AP).—Dr. James T. Shotwell, Columbia University faculty member, told a William and Mary convocation today that the "safeguard of freedom lies in the erection of those institutions which insure justice."

He delivered the annual Cutler lecture on the Constitution as a part of William and Mary's observance of the 249th anniversary of its founding.

Boys' Group Prepares To Help Spur Patriotism

Washington, (U.P.). — Defense of America is a man sized job, but American boys want to do their bit.

That's the word from the Junior National Defense Association. Object of the group is to aid boys in forming junior police clubs, baseball teams and aviation groups, in order to "learn about the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, sportmanship, care of health, unity and patriotism," according to an announcement here.

Scrapiron Shortage False, Union Official Says

Copyright, 1942, by Chicago Sun

Harold J. Ruttenberg, of the C. I. O. Steel Workers, charged yesterday that the War Production Board's scrap iron division was "headed by scrap iron brokers who can take advantage of confidential information" to boost prices.

Appearing before the House Committee on Small Business, Ruttenberg, Steel Workers' Organizing Committee economist, termed "scandalous" what he described as "a governmental practice of turning our governmental machinery over to persons who are industry minded."

Ruttenberg testified that brokers in the steel industry were promoting a "shortage," which he said did not exist on a long-range basis, for the purpose of increasing prices and maintaining a monopoly. He added that a C. I. O. investigation of scrap metals showed that the present low supply of mills was only temporary.

Ruttenberg suggested a requisition program under which the entire supply of scrap metals in junk yards would be allocated to mills actually needing it.

On the basis of Ruttenberg's testimony, Chairman Patman (Democrat), Tex., said that if the witness' statements were confirmed there might be sufficient steel to keep thousands of small businesses, which are dependent on steel and which employ 100 or less employes, from having to close down.

This prediction, said Patman, was based on a statement by Floyd B. Odlum, WPB contracts distribution chief, that 4 per cent of the total steel supply would take care of the little fellows engaged in civilian production.

Patman called Ruttenberg's testimony "startling" and said the committee would give it close study with a view to possible action.

Ruttenberg declared that control of scrap metal supplies was "in the hands of about a dozen large brokers" who through financing of junk dealers had the power to make the dealers do as the brokers desired. One of his recommendations was that the Government institute a program to aid the junk dealers financially so they would not be at the mercy of the broker.

Panama Defers Plans to Build New Embassy

The need for war materials to whip the Axis hit Embassy Row yesterday, halting plans of the Panamanian Embassy to erect a handsome new headquarters on Massachusetts Avenue.

The Republic of Panama had purchased a site just west of the British Embassy, but announced yesterday that construction of a large embassy there would be postponed, probably for the duration.

The embassy is now housed at 1536 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

Decision to postpone construction of a new one was taken by the new Ambassador, Don Ernesto Jean Guardia, who took over in Washington last October.

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

Arriving in Washington soon will be Bolivia's first Ambassador to the United States, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla, who has been serving his country as Minister here for several years . . . Dr. Guachalla returned to La Paz following the conference at Rio de Janeiro, where he was Bolivia's representative . . . He will come back by plane, and his current schedule calls for him to be here by Sunday afternoon.

Envoy Guachalla

Attractive Senora de Guachalla, who has been visiting in her native Chile for some time, is expected to be back in Washington within a few weeks, and chances are there will be some spring-time entertaining in one of Washington's newest embassies . . . Having been here since 1936, the Guachallas are among the "oldest inhabitants" in the Diplomatic Corps . . . Dr. Gauchalla came here with wide experience in the field of international relations, had taught international law at the University of La Paz, and later had served as his country's minister of foreign affairs . . . The son of a former Bolivian Minister to the United States (Dr. Fernando Guachalla, who came here during McKinley's Administration), and the brother-in-law of another (Dr. Eduardo Diez de Medina), the current envoy was merely carrying out a family tradition when he presented his first credentials to the President.

Senora de Guachalla

A gracious legation chatelaine, who favors impromptu, informal parties, rather than diplomatic functions of expansive proportions, Senora de Gauchalla is sure to slip gracefully into her new place as an embassy hostess . . . Meanwhile, however, the date of her return to Washington is not yet decided . . . "Next month—or perhaps the next"—seems to be the most definite line available on her return plans.

B. C. Is 'Before Christening'

The initials B. C. may signify one thing in the history books, but in the Lister Hill household these days B. C. means "Before the Christening" . . . and everything else dates accordingly . . . Such has been the situation ever since fan mail began pouring in to the pretty wife of the Senator from Alabama, who on Saturday will serve as sponsor at the launching of the country's newest battleship—the Alabama, at Portsmouth, Va.

Josephus Daniels

Along with fan letters have come replies from some of Mrs. Hill's friends invited to be on hand when she smashes the bottle of champagne across the new ship and gives it the name picked out for it long ago . . . Especially amusing was the answer that came from Josephus Daniels, former United States Ambassador to Mexico and a lifelong "dry" . . . Wrote Mr. Daniels: "I regret that I cannot be present at the launching of the Alabama. As you know, I am a confirmed dry, and I feel that champagne should be broken over ships."

Maid of honor for Mrs. Hill at Saturday's ceremony will be Juliana Sparkman, daughter of Representative and Mrs. John J. Sparkman, of Huntsville, Ala. . . . Accompanying Mrs. Hill to Portsmouth will be Senator Hill, their 13-year-old daughter, Henrietta Fontaine, and Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black . . . A number of other Capitalites also plan to be on hand for the launching.

Cupid's Darts . . . and a Departure

You can expect an engagement announcement out of Canada some time soon in regard to a lovely young lady employed at the Australian Legation here and the young man who is Second Secretary at the same legation . . . Her initials are N. S., and she's en route to her Canadian home now to make final arrangements . . . On the trail of confirmation of the rumor, I called Patricia Jarrett, that dynamic young woman who has helped me out on many a "story" from the Australian Legation the past year . . . "Don't know anything about it," said Pat. But she had some news along another line.

Miss Patricia Jarrett

After a series of departure delays, she will be off from Washington on Saturday for the West Coast and will sail for her homeland the middle of next week. ("This time, it's definite—positively," she said). Dynamic, accommodating, and clever at handling press relations, she made a host of friends during her comparatively short stay in Washington . . . She's going back to Melbourne to continue her newspaper work and to finish that book on which she has been working for some time . . . "But I'll be back," she promises . . . I hope so.

Party Patter: The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Litvinoff will be guests of honor when the South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close entertain at dinner next Tuesday . . . R. Keith Jopson, British Commercial Secretary, will be host at a cocktail party at the Sulgrave Club on Thursday . . . Capt. and Mme. Karl Wessel, of the Swedish Legation, will have guests dining with them tomorrow evening, and Mme. Wessel will be a luncheon hostess on Friday . . . And, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Lewis will receive from 5 to 8 o'clock on Thursday in their Alexandria home.

About The Town: Guests at the Gifford Pinchots' Sunday luncheon for Vice President and Mrs. Wallace asked for the recipe for her delicious dessert, which is something like baked Alaska, piled into a volcano with smoke curling from the top . . . It's one of Mrs. Pinchot's special recipes; she made it up herself and calls it "Smokey Joe" . . . Resourceful Mrs. William O. Douglas didn't like the round neckline of her black lace and chiffon dinner gown, so in a mood of experimentation, she tried the dress on backward, found she preferred the neckline that way, and proceeded to wear it to a party that very evening . . . At least half a dozen friends commented on her pretty "new" frock . . . Those pretty white camellia corsages you may have seen Mrs. Max Truitt wearing the past few days were North Carolina bouquets sent her by Mrs. Josiah Bailey . . . Not one to do favors by halves, Mrs. Bailey sent a round dozen of them, and Mrs. Truitt had a fresh one to adorn her costume just about every time she stepped out to a party last week.

Gene Tierney And Husband Are in Town

Hardly had they arrived in town yesterday when Count and Countess Oleg Cassini—she's Gene Tierney, of film fame—were plunged into a round of parties that promise to go on during their entire Capital stay.

Starting the series was the cocktail party given by Count and Countess Igor Cassini, who entertained a large company in their new home on Thirty-third Street. Later last evening Countess Cassini, mother of Oleg and Igor, gave a buffet supper in honor of the visitors. This evening Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson will be hosts at a buffet supper for them.

Tomorrow Jack Logan will give a cocktail party at the 1925 F Street Club to honor the Cassinis and on Thursday Mrs. Natalie Keeney Phillips will be hostess at a similar party. On Friday Maj. and Mrs. Robert Stewart-Richardson will give an afternoon party for the visitors.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. Eleanor Patterson will be hostess to the young couple at her home on Dupont Circle. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja will give a supper party for them when they will share honors with the Resident Commissioner of the Philippines, Joaquin Elizalde. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim will be hosts at a cocktail party in honor of the Cassinis on February 18.

Culbertsons Will Entertain Rev. Nevils

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson have issued invitations for a reception on Saturday afternoon in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue. Honor guest will be the Rev. Coleman C. Nevils, who has returned to Georgetown University after three years in New York City.

This is a first in a series of receptions which the former Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. Culbertson will give this season. On Tuesday of next week they will be hosts in honor of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Albert J. McCartney.

On March 6 Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson will entertain at a large reception in their apartment honoring the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih.

Miss McReynolds Becomes Bride Of M. G. Britt

Stealing a march on her friends, Miss Katherine Borst McReynolds was quietly married on January 17 to Myron Gardner Britt—and announcements are just now being issued.

Miss McReynolds, who is the daughter of the Administrative Secretary to the President, William H. McReynolds, and Mrs. McReynolds, is a popular member of the younger set here. Her father was formerly Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. She attended Mount Vernon Seminary last year.

The ceremony took place at 5:30 o'clock in the chapel of the Mount Vernon Methodist Church, with only the immediate family attending. Following their wedding trip to Atlantic City the couple are making their home in the Piney Branch Road Apartments. Mr. Britt, who is with the OPM, attended the University of Texas and George Washington University.

Hendricks Will Live in Pepperell

The bridegroom is a graduate of American University here. Since 1940, however, he has been on duty with the First Division, United States Army. He is the son of Mrs. Bessie Edwards, of Rochester, N. Y.

The bride is the former Miss Mary Louise Kent. She is the daughter of Mrs. Henrietta S. Kent and the late Charles S. Kent, of Hamburg, Pa., and is a graduate of the West Chester Teachers College.

Eatons' Silver Anniversary 'Just Like a Second Wedding'

By Martha McLean

"Just like a second wedding," was the way Mrs. Philip B. Eaton described the preparations for the fete commemorating their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, which she and Capt. Eaton gave between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock at Comynholm, their house near Klingle Road.

Just as busy and exciting as the wedding day were the full hours before yesterday's event for Mrs. Eaton, and later it was almost as thrilling as a wedding when some 50 of their friends began to drop in to offer congratulations.

Everywhere for her "special event" Mrs. Eaton had carried out the significant silver and white motif. There were white carnations tied with silver ribbon for each feminine guest and boutonnieres of the same flower for the men. And her assistants, numbering 17, each had adorning her shoulder a corsage of white hibiscus with silver ribbon for its center.

The hostess was in orchid chiffon, fashioned with a "jacket which was not a jacket" but only gave that effect by means of a band of coral and pearls. Most proud, however, she was of the orchids, which were her husband's gift to her—and were clipped by a silver pin encrusted with pearls. Even her slippers were silver, like her anniversary.

No wedding is complete without a cake, and neither is an anniversary. The Eatons had one cake, large and white and glistening with those two important dates February 9, 1917-1942. The table, a huge one, was all in silver and white, too, with two silver candelabra and white carnations and white lilies with maidenhair fern. Laden with silver it was, Mrs. Eaton's wedding silver, of course.

Flowers filled the house. In the living room, it was white gladioli and carnations again, and on the mantle, silver candles in silver holders with more carnations. Yellow daffodils and blue iris were a note hopeful of spring in the library, and in the upstairs drawing room yellow snapdragons made their showing. And then besides the flowers the hostess had arranged herself, was the profusion of floral offerings which poured in during the day from friends.

The tea table was under the jurisdiction of Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mrs. L. T. Chalker, Mrs. Parker West, and Mrs. Edwin Halsey.

Another representative from diplomatic circles, Senora de Recinos, wife of the Guatemalan Minister, presided over the punch bowl, together with Mrs. Craig W. Muckle, wife of Maj. Muckle, U. S. A.; Miss Linette Fisher, of Cannes, France, and New York; Mrs. E. D. Jones, wife of Capt. Jones, U. S. Coast Guard, and Mrs. Benjamin Cassidy, wife of Col. Cassidy, U. S. Army Air Corps. Miss Fisher is the house guest of Mrs. Margaret Nohowel.

Serving coffee were Mrs. Nohowel, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Russell R. Waesche, wife of Rear Admiral Waesche, U. S. Coast Guard, and Mrs. Fred J. Irish. Mrs. Harvey Fletcher Johnson, wife of the engineer in chief of the Coast Guard, was also on hand assisting. Capt. Eaton is assistant engineer in chief under Rear Admiral Johnson. Also assisting were Mrs. L. B. Montfort, Mrs. William E. Pearson, Mrs. Burke Summers, and Mrs. James Gawne, wife of Capt. Gawne, U. S. N.

Later after the many well wishers had made their adieus, Capt. and Mrs. Eaton sat down to dinner with ten guests and later the evening was spent playing bridge.

Miss Drury Is Married In California

Mrs. Newton B. Drury, wife of the director of the National Park Service, will return to Washington today from Berkeley, Calif., where she attended the recent marriage of her daughter, Miss Betty Drury, to Ensign Austin Lewis Edwards, son of Mrs. Louis A. Edwards, of Oakland, Calif.

The wedding took place a few days ago at the home of Duncan McDuffie in Berkeley and the bride was given in marriage by her father, who flew to California for the wedding, returning the following day. Dean W. R. Hodgkins of St. Mark's Church, San Francisco, officiated. Music was provided by Mrs. Tracy Crawford, an old friend of the bride's family.

The bride's gown was ivory satin fashioned with a long bodice and short train. Her tulle veil was held by a coronet of lace worn by her great-grandmother at her wedding. Her bouquet was white orchids with cyclamen spray and bouvardia.

The bride's cousin, Miss Elsa Douglas, was her maid of honor, wearing white faille cut with the same long torso as the bridal gown. She carried Dutch iris in a spray. Gowned like Miss Douglas were the other attendants, Miss Constance Ohnsorg, of Sacramento, Calif., and Miss Anneliese Windesheim, of Berkeley, classmates of the bride at the University of California. Coronets of iris like those which made up bouquets were in their hair.

Best man was George B. Reed, of Berkeley, and ushers were the bride's younger brothers, Newton Drury, jr., and Hugh Drury. An informal reception followed the ceremony, and afterwards the couple left on a honeymoon in Yosemite National Park, where the skiing season is in full swing. They will make their home at 908 Mendocino Avenue, Berkeley.

The bride attended the University of California and California College of Arts and Crafts. Ensign Edwards went to Drew's Preparatory School in San Francisco and West Point Preparatory School, Fort Scott, San Francisco.

Enough Rugs in Sight for Present; Rules Given for Long-Range Choice

The Oriental rug is still one of the most cherished of all floor coverings. It is most effective when used with dark glowing colors—even with dark walls as in the library in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Averell Harriman (shown above). The portrait of Mrs. Harriman over the mantel was painted by Derain. She is also in inset, with her husband, American Minister to Great Britain and Lend-Lease Expediter.

Cotton and Rayon To Figure More in Floor Coverings

Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE RUG industry has been worried about the wool situation so long that the actual curtailment climax found them at least conditioned to take the shock. But just what will it mean, translated into a homemaker's language?

Despite the Government's order curtailing use of wool by 50 per cent, there still should be enough rugs to go around for the present. The rug men estimate that there are rugs on hand now to last six months of normal business, providing there's no stampede buying. They qualify their reassurances with the warning that there probably won't be the wide choice of colors, patterns and sizes that American women have become accustomed to finding.

Undoubtedly the shortage of wool will be reflected in the use of more cotton rugs and more rugs made of reprocessed wools and with mixtures of rayon fibers. It may even be that the war necessity will speed up the development of a new type of rug fiber that is as satisfactory as wool for floor covering . . . thus far none of the substitutes can be said to be up to wool in quality for the purpose.

Well, so much for the facts of war—the rest of the rug story must be told in terms of making the most of what we have. We'll be doing a lot of that during the coming years so we might as well get in practice. A few basic principlese in room planning will cover most problems—if you have a figured rug of compelling design, don't use big figured cretonne or wall paper with it. If you have a plain broadloom rug, don't use all plain surfaces with it—some pattern in fabrics or wall paper will be needed to break the monotony. If you have scatter rugs, keep the wood floor shining clean and don't use too many other patchy unrelated details of decoration.

As for colors in rugs—the plain dark broadlooms show dust and footmarks the most . . . oddly enough the light broadlooms are the most practical. In plain color rugs, the twist or pebble weaves are best for not showing footmarks or dust. The all-over two-tone patterns are very fine for staying presentable with hard wear, too. Good Oriental rugs have a universal sort of charm that makes them suitable in many places and with most furnishings. In combining colors, remember that deep rich tones in rugs usually require heavier tones in complementary things to be used with them. Softer paler rugs need lighter colors.

If you're handy about such things, you can make rugs for yourself. The nicest would be a needlepoint rug made of flower squares—you can add to this indefinitely till you have a really big rug. Hooked rugs suggest versatile patterns, and then, of course, there are always braided and crocheted rugs that can be made out of old scraps.

Grow Cheery Garden in Glass

A PICTURESQUE little corner of the desert for your own window sill—this terrarium of odd cacti, sempervivums and yellow-flowered saxifraga.

Nothing could be easier to make or care for than a terrarium. Any glass container with a lid will do—a round fish bowl, perhaps, with a pane of glass. Know what soil to use, how much moisture to give and you're all set.

Desert plants like a bottom layer of drainage material, then a layer of sandy loam, kept only slightly moist. Put the cover on during cold nights.

You can shift the scene from desert to lush garden by using ferns, coleus, begonias. For these you'll need sandy garden loam or fiber. An occasional teaspoon of water will be enough if the terrarium is covered, keeping the air moist inside. Wipe off droplets of moisture that collect on the lid so they won't harm your begonias.

You can grow delightful house plants so many ways—in terrariums, jars of water, flower pots!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Reader Thinks 'Baffled Husband' Should Give Thanks on His Knees for His Wonderful Wife, If Worst That Can Be Said of Her Is That She Smokes

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading the complaint from "Baffled Husband" in your column of February 3, and the subsequent storm of outraged Victorianism it unleashed, I am impelled to "shoot off" along with the rest. In the first place, my dear Miss Haworth, you were too lenient in your judgment of the stupid, ridiculous husband who has nothing more to worry about than the fact that his wife smokes,—occasionally! behind locked doors! and then gargles profusely so as not to offend his hypersensitive olfactory nerves! You said in your reply that 60 per cent of womankind in the Western World smokes today. I believe that is a conservative estimate. Judging from my contact with smoking and nonsmoking women, I would say the number who smoke is nearer 80 to 90 per cent.

Your Victorian correspondent and his defenders should wake up and die right. This is the twentieth century and female smokers are so prevalent today as to make nonsmokers of their sex seem almost oddities. If "Baffled Husband's" wife has no worse fault than smoking, he should get down on his knees and thank God for a wife who is pure and good. She might have been a dipsomaniac. She might have been a nymphomaniac. She might have been a dope addict. She might have been a brainless little idiot. She could have been sloppy, extravagant or emotionally cold. She might have been a thousand things worse than a smoker. So, I repeat, if smoking is her only vice, as he avers, then he is a lucky husband indeed; and he has a pearl of a wife.

True enough, there was a time, a generation ago, when a woman who smoked was regarded by the respectable middle class as "bad" or "fast." But that day is long gone. Women have been emancipated. Or hasn't your correspondent heard? As for his belief that smoking "makes a woman look coarse and tawdry," that is just tommyrot. That depends upon what the onlooker is reading into the picture; and back in the days when "Baffled Husband" was getting his bearings in life maybe it was only the strumpets who smoked. I wouldn't know. But I can tell him for sure that there isn't a hussy in a carload of women smokers today. Excessive smoking is detrimental to appearance, of course, but from the health angle only, just as intemperance in any form detracts from good appearance.

I agree with you, Miss Haworth, that it is the husband's behavior that calls for reform. He is suffering from malignant distortion of mind. His intolerant attitude toward his wife, his picayune quarrel with her, his neurotic spying and suspicions all smack of a warped mental outlook. That man is nervously sick who would let his wife's moderate smoking disturb him to the degree that this chap admits. The minds of normal people are concerned with other things.

As for the little group of antediluvian crusaders who sprang to support his attack upon his wife, I can only conclude that they are all infected with the same neurotic virus and that they had better see a psychiatrist or do some reading and research on the subject of modern mores. "Virginia Gentleman," for instance, who tremulously calls upon womankind to "hold high the torch of fastidious goodness" for wayward man's guidance, ought to hie away to some spot where civilization can't pollute him. To the South Pole, perhaps.

To "Midshipman," who sampled nicotine and forswore it forever and now insists that "the woman of his choice be a nonsmoker," I would say, firstly, that, "There is no saint so self-consciously virtuous as the reformed drunk" (a saying that goes double for the reformed smoker); and, secondly, that midshipmen are notoriously stuffy and even prudish in passing judgment upon "pure, sweet American womanhood." Ask any girl who has "dragged" at Annapolis, or who has read the fatuous "Handbook for Drags," distributed by these adolescent tin gods in brass buttons.

Thank you, Miss Haworth, for allowing me to air my opinions. And accept my indorsement of your original, never-more-right opinion in this case. You are doing a fine job. Sincerely.

MAN READER.

Cigarette Poor Substitute For Good Conscience

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column every day with interest and profit, and, in the main, I agree with your opinions. However, I was not wholly satisfied with your reply of February 3 to the 31-year-old man who adores his wife but deplores her habit of smoking—a point of disagreement which he believes is threatening the stability of their 13 years' marriage. You thrust the burden of the quarrel back upon him, taking the attitude that his wife is within her social rights in smoking, and that he is stepping "out of bounds" in chiding her about it.

I realize, of course, that in striving to mend the quarrel, you were in the position of having to work constructively with the material at hand, namely: the husband's point of view. And I grant you that his manner of expressing himself suggested that he was speaking with extravagant emotional intensity. But it seems to me it would have been well to point out,—just in case the wife might read your remarks,—that if she loves her husband as dearly as he loves her she should be glad to give up smoking just to please him. A young sister of mine smoked incessantly until she became engaged (and later married) to a young man who does not smoke. When it developed that he would prefer her not to smoke, she gave up cigarettes willingly, although not without a real struggle to conquer the habit, at first.

I am a widow and I have never smoked. Therefore, my late husband and I had no disputes on that question. But there were other self-indulgent habits of mine,—such as reading late into the night,—which annoyed him. And could I bring him back I would do everything little thing just as he wished. It would be my pleasure to give him joy and happiness. As it is, I pay for my unthinking stubbornness with remorse.

I would not resort to debatable arguments involving health and morality in encouraging this wife to give up smoking. I would ask her, rather, to weigh her smoker's habit in the balance against her husband's happiness, and decide which of the two makes the greatest bid for her allegiance. Speaking as one who neglected to make a choice when confronted by a similar challenge,—I would say confidently that the knowledge of having pleased her husband, even at some personal sacrifice, will give her most contentment in the long run. It is as some philosopher (I think it was Kant) remarked about virtue: "There is little feeling of reward at the time of doing. The joy comes in retrospect." Sincerely, COLUMN FAN.

Spot Exercise Will Pare Off Extra Pounds

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOUR extra pounds have settled in spots, it's spot exercise for you. By making use of the positions and movements which put the fat-enmeshed muscles to work, you can have a figure as lovely as any movie star's.

Let's say you want to put pressure on the spare tire around your midriff. You can do it with a combination of stretching and twisting, varied with stretching and bending. These exercises are so effective for the waistline muscles that they will trim half an inch off your waistline in a week.

First, the stretch-twist: Stand with hips squarely to the front, arms held straight out to the sides, shoulder level. Pull yourself slim through the middle of your figure, then, moving the hips as little as possible, twist around to the side. Face front again and twist to the other side.

The Stretch-Bend

Now, the stretch-bend: Hold the arms overhead and stretch through the middle—that usually slack region between ribs and hips. Then bend acutely to the side, as far as you can without toppling over, come back to position, and bend to the other side. This is not a forward bend, but a side-bend, and the trick is to keep your figure pulled up slim, hips in line, as you concentrate the muscular pull at either side.

But those waistline slimmers won't do a thing for your diaphragm. A diaphragm bulge calls for another technique, and here it is: Lie on the back on the floor, stretched to full extension with legs straight down on the floor, arms on floor overhead. At the beginning you may find it necessary to anchor the toes under a heavy chest of drawers or the foot of the bed. At any rate, practice coming up to sitting position. As soon as you can work without anchoring the feet, progress by bending forward and touching hands to toes. Repeat three times each day the first week, and slowly increase the number.

Hip Exercise

To trim down the hips, do rolling and leg swinging exercises. A good beginning exercise is to lie full length on the floor and simply roll from side to side, making a point of rolling well over on the fat pads on the sides of the hips. For a leg-swinging exercise that is different, lie face downward on a heavy table with legs straight down, feet on the floor, and raise alternate legs backward to a 45-degree angle.

A slight variation of this leg work will perfect the thighline. Stand with the back to the table, hips slightly out but hands on table for support, then raise one leg up as high as you can get it and swing from one side to the other.

China United, Democratic Women Told

CONTRARY to popular belief, China is a unified nation, not a mass of disgruntled factions, according to Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese Ambassador.

Guest speaker yesterday at the Woman's National Democratic Club's weekly luncheon, the scholarly Ambassador said: "Except for very short periods of foreign separation, China has been united for 21 centuries." He pointed out that since about 220 B. C., his nation had been continuously united with one system of written language and education.

"While the 55-month-old war has brought greater unity," Dr. Shih explained, "it would have been impossible to unite such a large country in so short a time if it had been greatly divided. In peacetime it is not completely patriotic, but in facing an aggressor it is completely unified.

"This sense of continental unity, which the impatient foreign observer often fails to understand, is one of five reasons why China, so ill-equipped and unprepared, had been able to withstand the Japanese onslaught for more than four years."

Space and Man Power Nation's Chief Assets

The Ambassador listed vast space, tremendous man power, internal economic reconstruction and external aid as other reasons why his country was able to continue the fight against the Axis powers.

Estimating Chinese forces as two million well-equipped seasoned fighters, with three million in reserve, Dr. Shih, pointed out that the fighting army is larger and stronger than when the war started four years ago.

In discussing the economic and industrial reconstruction of China, Dr. Shih said that 400 Chinese factories had been dismantled and transported to the interior. This includes many tons of machinery and tools.

"Without modern means of transportation, much of this heavy equipment," he said, "was transported on the backs of men and women."

It's Time to Reduce Nutrition Information To 'Kitchen Talk,' H. E. W. I. B. Speaker Asserts

ALTHOUGH Mrs. Clara Gebhard Snyder, chairman of the Home Economics Women in Business Department of the American Home Economics Association, knows all the technical language of nutrition she believes in plain talking.

"All technical information on nutrition," she said, "should be translated into the kitchen and dining room lingo."

Speaking to the members of the District H. E. W. I. B. at their dinner meeting last night at the A. A. U. W. Clubhouse, Mrs. Snyder declared that "housewives are getting more and more confused about vitamins and calories. They do not know how to count them or place them correctly in a meal. Not only are they confused, but also frightened, by the long list of milligrams and proteins."

Mrs. Clara G. Snyder

"Keep all printed as well as spoken material on the housewife's level," she urged. "It is your job as business women in home economics to present the program in a practical manner, so that it can be clearly understood and followed."

One of the most effective methods of presenting nutrition to the homemaker is to give guidance in menu planning, according to Mrs. Snyder, the alert director of foods and nutrition of the Wheat Flour Institute of Chicago.

She pointed out that, in Illinois, she had devised a simple demonstration handbook to be used as a sample yard stick. "This," she asserted, "is so simple that it can be put to use in any kitchen. Also, we have found the lecture demonstration method very effective in presenting the nutrition program to the public."

Discussing the possible effect of war on cooking methods, Mrs. Synder said the homemaker would be compelled to revise her cooking methods. "The housewife," she said, "must devote more time to planning and cooking the meal. It takes longer to prepare dried foods than the canned ones. So it's back to the kitchen in reality.

"Most of all, the homemaker must take care of what she has. She couldn't do better than to follow the old New England proverb—'Help eat up, wear it out, take care and make it do.'"

Dietary Tips for Reducers

IF IT'S reducing that takes your fancy, eat more proteins, fruits and leafy vegetables. Omit entirely fats and sweets, for they are foods that have no vitamins and mineral salts and add nothing but calories to your diet. This is the advice of Mrs. Robert Delafield Rands, chairman of the committee on consumer problems of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Speaking before the members of the Council of the Political Study Club at a meeting yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel, Mrs. Rands urged the audience to enroll in Red Cross nutrition classes.

She pointed out that it wasn't necessary to remember the scientific name or alphabetical designations of vitamins, so long as you include adequate quantities in the daily diet.

Listing milk as the most nearly perfect food, she said that "it should be supplemented with other foods, in order to obtain the necessary vitamins for energy."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Retirement Board Going to Chicago

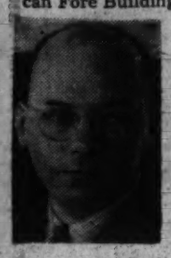
The new home of the 1800 Railroad Retirement Board employes will be the American Fore Building in Chicago.



The board has purchased the structure which is located on Chicago's north side at Rush and Pearson Streets. The first batch of employes will move in 30 days but it will be May 15 before all of them leave here. Some leases in the building won't be up before that time. It's estimated that 50 per cent of the employes will make the move.

Oscar Cox, who was nominated yesterday for Assistant Solicitor General, will continue to handle lend-lease legal matters. Recognized as one of the most capable young men in the Government, he was being considered for appointment as deputy to War Czar Don Nelson and as general counsel of the Joint Munitions Board . . . The Board of Legal Examiners has held up announcing an exam for young Government lawyers until Congress decides to appropriate it money. The House refused its request for funds, but an appeal was made to the Senate.

Col. William J. "Wild Bill" Donovan, director of the Office of Information, is expected to be called soon into active war service . . . Bob Amis is being backed for Deputy Wage and Hour Administrator by Southern Senators. He's now regional director at Birmingham and he has worked in several Federal agencies here. . . . Byron Price, the censor, is recruiting a staff of volunteers from other Federal agencies instead of bringing new employes here . . . The President's veto of the amendments to the Foreign Agent Registration Act was a kick in the pants to Alexander Holtzoff and the other Justice attorneys who drafted it. Attorney General Biddle and Col. Donovan got the President to veto it.

The huge Commerce Building, once called "Hoover's Folly," now has offices in its several hearing rooms. The big auditorium on the first floor has been converted into four conference rooms. That's how tight space it. . . . Patent Office will be moving for another ten days. . . . It's now reported that the dozen different Federal housing agencies will be merged under a new agency instead of in Federal Works. . . . John B. Kelly, director of OCD's physical fitness division, has appointed a national motor boating director. Presumably the director will encourage the public to buy motor boats to keep physically fit.

United Federal Workers of America asked Congress to compensate salaried Federal employes for compulsory overtime. It opposed the recommendation of the House Appropriations Committee for a 48-hour week "until a centralized and planned approach is taken." In a letter to Committee Chairman Cannon, the C. I. O. union pointed out that Federal workers are now unable to meet rising living costs on their fixed incomes. "Control of overtime," the letter stated, "through overtime pay and careful planning of work hours would go a long way toward improving the war effort through maintaining good health and high morale." The union also protests continuance of the Dies Committee.

Sidney Hillman has the inside track for appointment as chairman of the proposed manpower mobilization board. His competitors are Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt and Labor Secretary Frances Perkins. The board wouldn't absorb the Civil Service Commission. A member of the commission, probably Arthur S. Flemming, would sit on the board and the commission's work would be coordinated into the full labor supply picture. If Hillman gets the job, the board probably will be placed under the War Production Board instead of placing it in the Labor Department.

Here it is weeks after money became available for automatic promotions as provided in the Ramspeck-Mead Act and stil[illegible] employes haven't been [illegible] additional salary [illegible] them. Some of these employes are building guards, just about the lowest paid Federal employes here. War, Justice and Commerce also haven't paid all their eligible employes . . . General Accounting Office, which went on a 44 hour week yesterday, may set up a large night force.

MacArthur Honor Advanced

The House District Committee yesterday approved a bill changing the name of Conduit Road to MacArthur Boulevard in honor of the general who now leads America's fighting forces in the Philippines. Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, who introduced the bill said the change would "in a small measure pay tribute to MacArthur's heroic fight."

Gone With the Sugar Rations

A pleasant-mannered man sat down at a booth in a Post Square delicatessen and ordered a sandwich and coffee. He ate slowly, asked for his check, paid the cashier, and unhurriedly left. A few minutes later the waitress discovered that the sugar bowl also was gone. Nor had the diner left a tip.

Hotel Statler Fire Damage Found Slight

Officials of Hotels Statler Co., Inc., of New York, yesterday examined the charred frame of the partially completed 1000-room hotel at Sixteenth and K Streets Northwest, breathed a sigh of decided relief and announced that completion would be only slightly delayed with an opening date "late this year" still in sight.

The fire which drew an estimated crowd of 10,000 persons Sunday afternoon "was not as serious as it might have been," F. A. McKowne, president of the hotel chain, declared at a press conference.

Damage, McKowne said, was confined to a few horizontal steel beams, large quantities of timber used in the construction of concrete forms and for other building purposes, and a wooden hoist used to raise building materials to the upper floors. This was according to a preliminary survey.

No vertical columns appear to have been damaged, thus permitting contractors to rearrange building schedules and "work around" the damaged sections of the building, he said.

Cause of the fire remained undetermined yesterday, according to Fire Marshall Calvin G. Lauber. Lauber discounted reports of "possible sabotage," but said investigation is centering around the following four possibilities:

1. That some iron fire pots (or "salamanders,") used to keep concrete warm, tipped over in the high wind. (McKowne said his investigation revealed that the fires had been turned off at 11 a.m., six hours before the fire started.)
2. Careless smoking by workmen who were on the job doing electrical work and "laying rods" up to 4 p.m.
3. Hot metal left around by workmen.
4. Warming fires lighted to provide heat for persons working in exposed positions which were not properly extinguished.

McKowne said the fire started at the corner of L Street and Sixteenth Street on the second floor of the building and spread diagonally across the structure to K Street, where the hottest fires burned. The fire was fed by the tar-rich pine timbers used for construction purposes, he said.

500 Service Men From Fort Belvoir In Gay Audience

Five thousand circus fans filled Uline Arena last night for the opening of the Shrine Circus and reveled through 30 high-grade, thrill-creating, laugh-making acts.

They saw famed Clyde Beatty drill his equally famed lions and tigers, watched the powerful but graceful beasts leap through flaming barricades, and gazed with jitterbug admiration at the whirling Dervish tiger act.

They chuckled and roared as Power's four brainy elephants played baseball, and as one particularly adept fellow presented a Spanish dance, complete with tambourine.

They enjoyed themselves throughout—with the bears on motorcycles, the clown in the trick auto, the man on the flying trapeze, the tight-rope artist, and the amazing Wall-Dorfs, who perform 50 feet in the air.

The show opened with the massing of colors, presented by Almas Temple Oriental Band, Patrol and Drill team, and the Acca Temple Band of Alexandria.

The audience included many high ranking Government officials, and practically every member of the Washington Circus Fans Association, 500 soldiers from Fort Belvoir, together with their 40-piece band, saw the performance as guests of the Shriners, who will entertain 3000 soldiers during the circus' stay. Howard P. Foley, Almas Temple Shrine potentate, delivered the address of welcome.

Performances will be given every night through Saturday, and every afternoon, Wednesday through Saturday. Proceeds of the circus will benefit the Almas Temple charities fund.

Park View Citizens Ask Bus Restoration

House Unit Weighs Probe Of ABC Board

The House District Committee today has "under advisement" an investigation of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board proposed by Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, which he says is necessary to probe criticism directed at the board and its chairman, Thomas E. Lodge.

What probable action will be taken was not divulged by committee members following a 45-minute executive session yesterday. Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he had been authorized to make public only the following statement:

"A study of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was discussed. The matter is under advisement after discussion with the Commissioner." (Commissioner J. Russell Young attended the executive meeting.)

It is expected, however, that the committee will act on the recommendation at a later meeting.

Mall Urged for Parking

Representative Hebert announced last week that he would request the study after the reappointment of Lodge by the Commissioners resulted in criticism of his administration.

At an open hearing preceding the executive session yesterday Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, suggested that the central section of the Mall between Third and Fourteenth Streets be transformed into a large parking area. He declared there was sufficient space for 25,000 vehicles.

His proposal came during a discussion of the bill he has introduced which would place District parking lots and garages under the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission to regulate fees and rules.

Declaring that conversion of the Mall would temporarily mar its natural beauty, Representative Dirksen said, "I am as concerned as anyone with the beauty of the city, but we are at war and must make sacrifices. The land could be rezoned later, but during the emergency it should be put to a good use."

Hankin Suggests Change

Chairman Gregory Hankin, of the P. U. C. indorsed the "policy" of the legislation bringing parking lots under his agency's jurisdiction.

He recommended a change, however, which would prohibit the Commissioners from reviewing regulations on the P. U. C. regarding lots. He said a "quasi judicial" agency like the Commission should not have its actions subject to the review of a "political" body like the Board of Commissioners.

Representative Dirksen stated that there are 333 licensed parking lots in the District, while there are 222,800 motor vehicles registered here exclusive of commuters from Maryland and Virginia. These facts accentuate the need for regulation, he said.

Commissioner Young told the committee that the Commissioners plan to swear in soon 50 of the "best" auxiliary policemen to be used for guard duty at bridges and other strategic locations.

He said that public utilities companies will be requested to guard their own properties in order to release approximately 60 police to regular duty.

Funds Asked For Sewers, Water Here

Roosevelt Calls For Half Million; Facilities Planned For New Housing

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt late yesterday sent to Congress a request for $505,750 in supplemental appropriations for the District to be spent on sewer and watermain improvements demanded by increased private housing facilities in wartime Washington.

Meanwhile, Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, expressed the hope that the House might act tomorrow on the bill authorizing appropriation of 50 million dollars for the construction of homes for Federal war workers in the District and nearby areas.

Preference Asked

The Rules Committee probably will hear today Representative Lanham's request that the important measure be given preferential status, enabling it to come before the full House tomorrow.

The proposed sum would underwrite Federal construction of approximately 10,000 homes and facilitating public works.

The Presidential request for $505,750, received by the Senate Appropriations Committtee, would go for public works facilitating private housing already constructed or under construction. District officials emphasized last night.

Of the amount, $250,000 is earmarked for water mains and the same amount for sewers. The remaining $5750 would pay judgments already made.

"The amount is necessary for works over and above the facilities that will be required for the housing expected from the Lanham bill," said William G. Wilding, deputy budget officer.

He stated that the improvements would be spread over the entire District area where private building has mushroomed since the war emergency began, as in such areas as Anacostia.

The supplemental request probably will be added in the Senate to the deficiency bill of $398,803 for the District which the House passed yesterday.

Aged Home Approved

Chief among the items of the deficiency bill passed by the House was an authorization of $106,000 for improvements at the Home for the Aged and Infirm, at Blue Plains. The bill also carries funds paying for the salaries of 95 additional members of the Metropolitan Police Force.

The House Military Affairs Committee will hold a hearing today on a bill which would add 25 acres to the property of Arlington Cemetery. Thomas Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, will appear before the committee when it convenes at 10:30 a. m.

D. C. Area May Get 1700 More Hospital Beds

Funds for expansion of hospital facilities in the Washington metropolitan area—to a possible maximum of 1700 additional beds—may come from the 50 million dollar Lanham bill now in Congress, it was reported last night.

The suggestion was made by Charles P. Taft, of the Federal Security Agency, at a meeting with hospital representatives in the office of Commissioner Guy Mason.

He estimated the entire project would cost $6,800,000—based on about $4000 a bed.

6000 Hear Mrs. Roosevelt At Negro Rally

More than 6000 persons, many of them in uniform and regalia, representing the various Negro civic, fraternal and religious bodies of the Nation's Capital, gathered in overflow meeting last night at the Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal Church, to express their loyalty to President Roosevelt, and to hear an address by Mrs. Roosevelt on civilian defense.

Judge William C. Hueston, who presided, said that the purpose of the meeting was to present a cheering committee for Franklin Delano Roosevelt as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, for "an all-out expression of loyalty and support to him."

Mrs. Roosevelt painted America of the future as a nation in which all shall be free from want and restriction. She called for civilian defense work of a type which will make all citizens feel more secure, so that men on the battle front may develop that same sense of security.

"We won a war 20 years ago," she said, "but lost the peace, because we hid ourselves behind a smokescreen, and tried to come back to the same existence as before the war. But now the winds have blown the smokescreen away, and we are again face to face with the reality that we must be one solidified group.

"We must be a unified Nation, rather than many minority groups, working together for a great cause—the possibility of offering to the world a practical demonstration that people of different races and religions can be unified in purpose, and carry on peacefully together."

Mrs. Crystal Byrd Fauset, of Philadelphia, spoke of the Negro's struggle for liberty as a significant part of the union of the Americas. The Citizens Sponsoring Committee consisted of J. C. Arnold, H. O. Atwood, the Rev. R. W. Brooks, Dr. Paul Corneley, Dr. Russell A. Dixon, Dr. E. F. Harris, Dr. L. S. Holton, the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, Dr. Howard H. Long, Dr. W. C. McNeill, Mrs. Flaxie Pinkett, James E. Scott, Mrs. Marian Seymour, Robert L. Spivey, Charles M. Thomas, Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, Mrs. Velma G. Williams, J. Finley Wilson, and Miss Dorothy Height.

Thousands of Washingtonians yesterday took the town's newest experiment in mass transportation and social relations in stride and rode to and from work in the new 20 cent "pickup" taxicabs or jitneys.

John H. Royer, jr., president of the District Taxicab Association, pronounced the service in the morning hours a success, on the basis of the inability of all available cabs to satisfy the demand.

To improve service during the evening hours, Royer said, he would ask Gregory J. Hankin, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, to establish emergency taxicab loading zones outside of Government buildings where the jitneys could line up to take their passengers away with a minimum of confusion.

Hankin, who used the service himself, declared that he was "favorably impressed" with it.

A total of 250 taxicabs are participating in the system on a 30-day trial basis. From 7:30 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and from 3:30 p. m. to 6:30 p. m., the designated cabs operate as "pickups" within the first and second taxi zones, hauling up to a maximum of four passengers in the same general direction.

Royer said that the apparent shortage was due to the fact that the system started on Monday, which always is a heavy day; that the weather was cold, and that the change to "War Time" created some confusion and an added demand for cabs. He said all drivers have been urged to start earlier today to provide more complete service.

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the Police Department traffic division, said that the plan apparently had no effect on the movement of traffic, although some cab drivers were noticed loading passengers in bus zones. Although not prohibited, this practice should be avoided, he said.

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, had denounced Hankin"s pickup plan as a "guinea pig" idea and declared that it would jam up traffic.

The general public seemed to like the service, Royer said. In one cab two Government workers exchanged notes and found that they came from nearby towns "back in Minnesota." In other cabs, signs of blossoming friendships were noticed.

Drivers reporting to Royer said they carried more passengers than normally and increased their revenues. Many of them were able to make three and four trips as "pickups" during the morning rush period. Some had difficulty getting outside of the first zone during the rush period because of the great demand.

Hankin said the first day's trial pointed to the need for more information on the number of cabs on the street at one time. The P. U. C. has begun studies to develop a system to provide such information, he said.

Maurice Evans' 'Macbeth' Will Be an Extra Dividend

EVEN BEFORE the last three subscription plays of its regular season of six, at the National Theater, have been finally determined, the Theater Guild-American Theater Society directorate is announcing an extra dividend in the form of a seventh attraction to be made available to the faithful whose names appear in the book, at the bargain subscription prices. It's an old T. G.-A. T. S. custom.

MAURICE EVANS

This unearned increment of Grade-A entertainment, this early spring, will be the Maurice Evans-Judith Anderson "Macbeth" which, as we made known no longer ago than yesterday, will be closing this month in New York and coming along to E Street for the week of March 23. Mr. Evans at top prices is always a bargain, but with Miss Anderson added and at the subscription scale, it amounts practically to stealing a superlative evening in the theater on the part of the lucky ones who filled out those blanks.

For the last six years the T. G.-A. T. S. has declared an extra play dividend for its Washington subscribers. Last year, there were two, both John Golden productions—"Claudia" and "Theater." Last fall, Max Gordon's "Junior Miss" was presented to subscribers at the reduced tariffs, and now "Macbeth." No wonder the subscription enrollment is one of the largest in the country.

Of the three regularly scheduled subscription plays still to come, "Arsenic and Old Lace" seems to be a surety. A likelihood for another, at the moment, appears to be the new Philip Barry play, starring Katharine Hepburn, now in rehearsal, according to the grapevine. There were high expectations earlier in the season that the sixth play on the list would turn out to be Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine," recently presented at the single "command performance" that opened the President's birthday celebrations. There is still a lingering hope, but no assurance, that it will be possible to ink in this penciled entry. That ol' debbil child labor law! Anyhow, that's the way it stands, as of now.

The Mystery of the Non-Missing Author

For the consternation of the producer, the director, the press agent and all concerned with the presentation of "Angel Street," at the National next week, all of whom—with the possible exception of Manager Eddie Plohn and Treasurer Eddie Keller, of the National—have built up a vast obscurity about the name of Patrick Hamilton, author of the play, we take the liberty of quoting the following letter, dated Washington, February 5:

"Dear Mr. Bell: I have read your remarks on my old and dear friend, Patrick Hamilton, in yesterday's issue of the Washington Post with interest.

"As I am in regular correspondence with him, I thought perhaps you would care to know that he is living at Henley-on-Thames, near London; that in the autumn of 1937 he came to Washington and stayed with me for a short time and that the following are his works: 'Monday Morning,' 'Craven House,' 'Two-pence Coloured,' 'The Midnight Bell,' all novels; 'Rope,' a play; 'The Siege of Pleasure' and 'The Plains of Cement,' novels; 'Gas Light' and 'Hangover Square, or the Man With Two Minds,' plays. 1925 to 1941.

"Hamilton is one of my oldest friends; we grew up together in London; and, as I say, in 1937, a year after I left England, he came to this country for a short stay.

"Owing to a serious motor accident in London some years ago, he would be disabled from active service with His Majesty's forces. Hamilton is now 38 years old.

"'Gas Light'—or 'Angel Street,' as it is called here—was a great hit in London when first produced; is a current hit in New York and has already been filmed. Of course, my friend is fully aware of his deserved success.

"'Rope'—called 'Rope's End' in the U. S.—was also a remarkable success in London. I was at the first night, and it ran for several months on Broadway. 'John Brown's Body' was produced in London, but taken off after a short run. Believe me, Yours faithfully, (Signed) CARLOS MacKEHENIE, First Secretary to the Peruvian Embassy."

So there goes that press blurb and here go my thanks to Mr. MacKehenie. Just thought you'd like to know.

Tough time these film fellows have. Dan Terrell, of the Loew organization and Mrs. Terrell are in Sun Valley, Idaho, reaping the rewards of the best sales campaign on "Sun Valley Serenade;" that high-strung, Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, of Columbia, and his bride are honeymooning in Florida; Exhibitor Sidney Lust and Mrs. Lust are leaving for the Florida fishing banks today; Harry Brown, of Monogram, and Mrs. Brown are preparing to take off and a lot of the other boys are making eyes at the ticket offices facing South. And these are probably the sourest grapes you have ever tasted!

You-Should-Have-Thought-of-That-in-the-First-Place Note

Too bad you didn't go to bed an hour earlier Sunday night. Now, of course, there's no way to catch up on your sleep until six months after the war's over!

On Dress Parade!

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 9.—We wail, scream and yell at the New York critics who cut our pictures to ribbons and write stuff for their public. But nothing they've ever written can satirize our town as we do ourselves. Just after the gang went down to Washington and did themselves loads of good at the White House, and looked as motion picture stars should look, the Academy decided to reverse itself and give that annual dinner, but with a reverse twist; the men will wear sack suits and the ladies musn't come in evening gowns. Now I ask you! Could anything be sillier?

LIONEL BARRYMORE

There's a movement on foot, however—and I hope our girls carry it through—to take down from the shelf those form-fitting sweaters which Hays banned from the screen and wear 'em to the banquet. With Hollywood begging America to carry on—and how America's doing it!—we make ourselves a laughing stock. Would it break down anybody's morale to see our girls beautifully dressed? And yet the men who passed on this are intelligent men. But you wouldn't know it from such actions.

Lionel Barrymore has been working on his music again, this time orchestrating a number for Ann Ayars, who will sing in the next Kildare picture.

Walter Wanger's luncheon for Quentin Reynolds was something to lick your chops over. Everybody loves the guy. He doesn't pull his punches. Told of his experiences when in Russia with Averill Harriman and Lord Beaverbrook, including the 27-course dinner which Stalin gave them. Everybory was toasting everybody else. Reynolds said he got all the eggs, sugar, butter he wanted, but not much variety in the food. Never got nearer the battle line than a thousand miles, and said, "When people talk about my being a good reporter, it makes me howl—because not one prediction I've made about the war has come true."

David Rose, Paramount's head man in London, tells me our pictures grossed 40 per cent more in 1941 than they did in '40. Over there you have ration cards for everything except entertainment, and it's about the only thing left you can spend money on. People are hungry for laughs.

Una Merkel flew in from New York for one day's retakes on "Twin Beds." Goes right back to Manhattan. She's been an enormous radio success back there, and is wanted for a play.

Alexis Smith, driving home alone the other night, noticed a man in a coupe following her. After several attempts to shake him, which failed, she drove into a gas station and stopped. So did he. Turned out to be a boy friend from back home who hadn't seen her in ages and wanted her address.

Two Hearts That Beat as One!

PATSY KELLY AND BERT LAHR,

funsters who haven't been seen on the screen too much of late, either singly or together, seem to be polishing up their love technique on their first date in Rko-Radio's production of "Sing Your Worries Away," rapidly sneaking up on its release date. If our worries are to be sung away, it would be just as well to have somebody else do the singing!

'Plan M' for Invading England Invades the National Theater

By Nelson B. Bell

Although it strikes fire almost as often as it fails to ignite even a spark of dramatic interest, it is perhaps just as well that its sponsors did not reveal the content and development of "Plan M" in advance.

The new play, in three acts, by James Edward Grant, accorded its metropolitan premiere in the National Theater last night, is, in its own terms, as "celestially audacious and fantastic" as the Nazi theory of successful war strategy which it so imaginatively expounds and so emphatically explodes. Disclosed as box-office enticement, its premise would sound so bizarre as to defeat its own purpose with fatal conclusiveness—although something of the kind might inconceivably happen. A great many inconceivable things already have happened in this war. But nothing quite so chimerical as in "Plan M."

Granting, however, that it can be accepted that through years of minute planning and meticulous preparation, a trio of masquerading Hitlerites could capture the King of England and his high command in a body, successfully conceal them, and then take over and operate the War Office in London even for the one short morning consumed by the three acts, the extravagant charade still would fall something this side of a closely knit, direct and compelling dramatic narrative. In the midst of its most vital movements it finds occasion to pause for extraneous or only vaguely pertinent love scenes, the elaboration of conflicting political and military philosophies and the examination of purely personal idiosyncrasies. It alternates these periods of barren discussion with intervals of taut and violent action, a murder or two and the generation of a considerable, but generally short-lived, element of suspense and surprise. The alternating current of interest is so devised as to bring the final curtain down on an appreciable degree of audience enthusiasm.

It is the German invasion of England, of course, that provides the theme of the play. The headquarters of Gen. Hugh Winston in the London war office comes to life at the crack of dawn and proceeds to routine affairs that smack more of an afternoon tea than of the serious business of winning a war. The general's secretaries are a mother and daughter, who bring the cheery chatter of the livingroom at home into the supposedly grim bailiwick of the war lords; his orderlies are old friends who assume the familiarities of long intimacy and his cleaning maid an approachable young matron not averse to making a date. The matutinal callers are uniformed in the insignia of their rank and the detachments of lovelorn wooers, bewildered line officers and salts without ships.

Then comes the old friend, Dr. Hawes, and his two internes, to place Gen. Winston in his cabinet and bake out a little of the old neuritis. This Dr. Hawes is a no-good weakling, wearing the Nazi yoke, who gives his lifelong pal a soothing potion to quiet the jumpy nerves—a harmless little does of cyanide. Then the head interne takes over as the bogus Gen. Winston, the other as his chief lieutenant, and nobody knows the difference, although a little suspicion raises its ugly head now and again.

Having substituted a counterfeit for a real Plan M, the vanguard of the invasion is doing all right with its scheme to disrupt the British defense, until Gen. Winston II finds it expedient to shoot Admiral Farnsworth dead in his office for no very good reason, threaten the squeamish doctor and otherwise betray the "unforseen contingency" that usually

A cast sprinkled with notable names dies its best to bring cohesiveness to a play that contains much pungent dialogue, and too much that is utterly superfluous, but lacks the compactness of closely related incidents unfolded in logical and foceful sequence. Len Doyle, an actor of proved versatility, plays the dual role of Gen. Winston with something less than the vigorous dominance it requires, but manages the gradual crumbling of a littel man in a big job with some conviction. The veteran Lumsden Hare contributes the most consistently sustained characterization of any member of the large ensemble in the unsavory role of Dr. Hawes and Ellis Irving and Reynolds Denniston lend Wing Commander Rambeau and the ill-fated Admiral Farnsworth rather more than a shade of verisimilitude.

Anne Burr, the younger of the secretaries, has rather the best of the feminine assignments and performs her chores acceptably, with Margery Maude matching her effeciveness in the slightly lesser part of her mother. Joanna Duncan and A. P. Kay are effective as Mrs. Bodleigh and Orderly Horton, with Charles Gerrard bringing a familiar face from the cinema to the role of Rear Admiral Spring.

The others are as efficient as a spotty play will permit.

$3.00 Out-Thrills War!

New York, Feb. 9.

TRAVEL: Wing Commander Peter Barnes, who downed 13 planes in Crete and Africa, flew to New York last week and was brought to the Stork Club by Kyle Crichton, the magazine writer. "It was a frightf'ly exciting trip, coming here," said the R. A. F. ace, "awf'ly exciting—and cost me $3" . . . "What was exciting about it?" asked Crichton . . . "Well, I played poker with the co-pilot," Barnes explained. "I had a bad streak, crosing the South Atlantic—and was $19 behind. My luck changed when we reached Brazil, and I was lucky up to Puerto Rico—where I was $6 ahead. But then I ran into another bad streak—and I arrived in New York, out $3."

WAR DEPARTMENT: Commander Barnes, who is 25 years old, downed the last two of his 13 credited planes near Tobruk. He and another R. A. F. flier took to the air against 56 Italian lapes, and downed three of them before they themselves were shot down . . . Barnes dropped 15,000 feet before opening his parachute, to avoid being machine-gunned on the way down. When they reached their base, the commandant refused to credit them with the three Fascist planes, because there was no corroboration . . . That night they all listened to the Rome broadcasts. "Today, near Tobruk, our Fascist fliers downed 15 British planes," the announcer stated. "Three of our aircraft failed to return" . . . That broadcast supplied the necessary corroboration.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Orson Welles, who left for Brazil last week, is confident that he can do anything. Orson can paint, produce, direct, write, act—and besides, can do card tricks. One of his aides rushed onto the Mercury Theater set and announced: "Hey, fellers, Orson just jumped out of a window" . . . "But why?" the herald was asked . . . "Oh," he shrugged, "someone told him he couldn't fly."

BOOK DEPARTMENT: The newest in the series of critic writer feuds—engendered anew by Ben Hecht's attacks against the drama reviewers who panned his "Lily of the Valley"—involves Irwin Shaw's latest collection of short stories, "Welcome to the City." Shaw, in joining the writer-fights-back school, wired a famous reviewer who had written unfavorably of his book: "Such majestic lack of perception is wasted on a book-reviewer. You should be a drama critic."

SOCIAL NOTE: Ely Jacques Kahn, the architect who designed the USO clubhouses throughout the nation, overheard a group of sailors on Fifth Avenue, talking about a guided tour around the city. . . . "I'll be glad to show you the points of interest," Kahn volunteered. The sailors, hesitant at first, finally agreed. And so Kahn, the former Cornell professor who probably designed more of New York's buildings than has any other living architect, took his seat in the front of a Fifth Avenue bus and barked out the landmarks for the strangers in uniform.

THEATER DEPARTMENT: One of the highlights of "Banjo Eyes" is the scene where rookie Eddie Cantor sings "We Did It Before"—in front of a line of chorusmen attired in soldiers' uniforms. Cantor is accompanied, in the singing, by two of the chorus men. At a recent matinee, Eddie walked on stage, and began to sing "We Did It Before." At the proper cue, two of the men stepped out of line, to Cantor's side, and joined him in the song. They walked to the right, in perfect unison, then reversed, and Eddie saw the face of the man to his left—not a chorus boy, but a musical comedy star who had come to surprise him, Danny Kaye.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 9.—In a recent piece we suggested that there would be precious little bellyaching from baseball holdouts this coming semester. Well, the ink on that historic prediction was still sopping wet when there emitted from the quiet recesses of Hartsville, S. C., a bellow of hot rage from Louis Norman "Buck" "Bobo" Newsom, world's highest paid pitcher.

CONSIDINE

Bobo's salary of $35,000 or $40,000 had not yet been cut at the time he let loose the banshee cry of the holdout. He had not as yet received his 1942 contract from Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Tigers.

But old Bobo has been around long enough to have gotten pretty psychic about impending pay cuts. A bloke doesn't get shipped from Raleigh to Wilmington to Macon to Brooklyn to Jersey City to Macon to Little Rock to Chicago to Albany to Los Angeles to St. Louis to Washington to Boston to St. Louis to Detroit—over a period of 14 years—without acquiring some sixth sense to warn him of approaching trouble with the boss. In his slap-happy way, Bobo has had trouble with all of them except Briggs, who last year sent Bobo into some seventh heaven of happiness by corroborating Bobo's brag that he made more money than Bobby Feller.

But now there's going to be, ahem, a little trouble with Briggs. Mr. Briggs isn't building many automobile bodies these times. He is busily engaged in Detroit's tremendous war output. But he isn't too wrapped up in his titanic ventures to forget that his expensive righthand pitcher from Hartsville had one awful crummy season in 1941.

We don't like to remind Bobo about 1941, for he is just about our favorite ball player. But for the sake of the record, it appears that Bobo won 12 and lost 20, had a dismal earned run average of 4.61, gave up 118 bases on balls and finished forty-eighth among the American League pitchers for effectiveness, behind $5000-a-year pitching nonentities.

Tigers' Mr. Briggs Is No Dummy

We have a hunch that Briggs will inclose a little note with that 1942 contract and ask Bobo not to rush on to Detroit for a personal conference. Briggs is no dummy. He knows that if Bobo ever gets his ear, that the pitcher will convince him that he lost 19 of those 20 games by a score of 1-0, that Charley Gehringer kicked away the other loss and that with a trifle more support, Bobo's record might well have been 32 victories and no defeats. In fact, if Bobo ever gets into the inner sanctum of Briggs' office, he might even get a raise.

He's a powerful persuasive man, that Newsom. He can make a sportswriter see Bobo's side of the story even quicker than Max Baer can convince a boxing writer that, this time, he will fight seriously.

It was comforting to read Bobo's threat to quit baseball and operate his Hartsville restaurant. Comforting because it indicated that in some ways America remains unchanged. Wars and pestilence may come, but Bobo's traditionally comical indignation reminds us that not all things have turned grim.

Other ball players may yield quickly to whatever cuts the so-called patriotic owners may inflict on them. Other ball players, touched by the mounting hysteria of the times, may figure, "I better take what they offer me. If I squawk for my 'rights' those grandstand wolves will begin asking me why I ain't in khaki uniform."

But not old Bobo. Bobo isn't going to change. He weathered boom times, depressions, tank towns, frustrations, glory and finally big pay, simply by believing in himself when others refused to. He isn't going to change.

Bobo Will Be There When Season Opens

Bobo's holdouts are wonderful nonsense. No one can be as stern-looking, as unrelenting and as deeply unforgiving of his firm as Bobo can be the very eve of capitulation. Six or seven years ago, in the midst of one of his holdouts while he was with Washington, we visited him in Hartsville. And after leaving to continue our trip to the Orlando training base of the Senators, Buck, as he was called then, instructed us to tell Clark Griffith that he would quit baseball rather than play for him. He punctuated the message with mule-skinner's vehemence.

We dutifully carried the message by fast auto to Griff and were just about to give it to him, upon arrival, when Griff spotted us first and said, "You arrived just in time for a story. Buck Newsome drove in about an hour ago and signed up without a whimper." We asked Newsom about his surrender, when we saw him, and the big, black-haired, Ring Lardnerish pitcher winked loudly and darkly hinted that Griff had given him an enormous raise. The probable truth was that Griff docked him for costs of stamps during the dickering period.

Anyway, Bobo will pitch for the Tigers during 1942, no matter what he says between now and the middle of March. Do you think he'd let his reputation for veracity or a few thousand dollars stand in the way of his chances of pitching the opening game? If you do you're wrong, for the ham quotient in old Bobo is so strong that he'd pay Briggs for the privilege of being able to strut his stuff on opening day. Buck knows he's in for a great season—a season that will make old Hartsville ring with cheers for him again. "Just gimme a couple of runs and I'll make 'em moan . . ."

John Murphy Sees Boom Time For Baseball's Forgotten Men

Bullpen Stars Will Be More in Evidence During Coming Season

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 9.—What with night games, double-headers and the loss of young hurlers to the draft, Johnny Murphy, ace relief hurler of the New York Yankees, observed today that it looks like a busy season for us relief pitchers."

"Not that we don't work hard enough as it is," explained Johnny as he mopped a perspiring brow after a round of golf with George Selkirk.

"People think relief pitchers have an easy time of it because they work and then. They don't realize that only a couple of innings a game now starting pitchers work one day and rest three, while we have to be ready to pitch every day all season long.

"I'm in the bullpen just about every day. Some days I may not face a batter, but I'll throw as many balls as the fellow who's pitching the game. Other times I may work a couple of innings four or five games in a row."

"Reliefers" Face Added Work

It will be the same, only more so, during the coming season, Murphy believes, with added strain being put on the "reliefers" because of the large number of twin bills, more night games and slack to be taken up because of the loss of younger pitchers to the armed forces.

In his eight seasons with the Bronx Bombers, Murphy has won 73 games, mostly in relief roles, and saved twice as many more. Last year he was an unsung hero in the club's pennant drive, relieving in 35 games, winning 8, losing only 3 and posting the American League's second best earned run average—1.99 per game.

Johnny lists the requirements of good relief pitching as a good curve, control and ability to outguess the batter.

"Nine out of ten batters like fast ball pitching,' he said, "so naturally we throw 'em curves. Control is important because a base on balls sometimes does as much damage as a base hit in a tight spot.'

Miss Tainter Is Medalist

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 9.—Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak., fired a 77, 5 over women's par, today to win medal honors in the annual Palm Beach tournament.

Nancy McClave, of Maplewood, N. J., had a 79, and two other players, Mrs. P. E. Nolan, of Newcastle, Pa., and Grace Amory, of Palm Beach, shot 81s.

Miss Amory, Palm Beach society girl, who was runner-up to Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., here last year, got off to a shaky start, with a 10 on the first hole.

Miss Tainter also had her troubles, taking a 7 on the par 44 third.

Fritzie Zivic Stops Chilean In Benefit Bout

Pittsburgh, Feb. 9 (AP).—Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburgh's former world's welterweight champion, showed he still has a lot of fight left in him tonight as he punched his way to a decision over Raul Carrabantes, flashy Chilean, in the main ten-round event of an Infantile Paralysis Fund Show. The winner weighed 148¾ pounds to 144 for Carrabantes.

The show attracted a crowd of 5125 fans who paid $15,359.05.

Zivic appeared ahead in seven rounds to the South American's two with one even. Carrabantes' speed saved him considerable punishment. There was much mugging and back-handing in the clinches, with the former champ pulling his smaller foe around and in turn getting butted.

Jacobs Says Conn Will Meet Louis

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—Promoter Mike Jacobs said today Billy Conn definitely would be the June opponent of Joe Louis, regardless of how the Pittsburgh boy's fight Friday night with Tony Zale turns out.

"Conn will get the spot, regardless," Jacobs said just before boarding a plane for New York. He added that Lou Nova would have to "get and beat a couple of guys before he can hope for another Louis match."

Conlon Wins Over Garza In Clincher

Takes Bruising Bout In 175-Pound Class To Decide Issue as Explorers Bow Again

By Bill Burnett

In a match which was hardly recognizable as the college version of boxing, Columbus University's glove wielders traded punch-for-punch but eventually lost a 5-3 cerdict to ring representatives of Florida U. last night at Turner's Arena.

Never a dull moment marked the blood-and-thunder action, witnessed by less than 300 fans. There were no knockouts, technical or otherwise, but neither was there a slow or tiresome buot.

In losing its second decision in four outings, the Explorers were forced to forfeit the 126-round scrap, lost the first two actual engagements and were never able to catch up. They made it hot for the 'Gators, however, before towering Frank Conlon ended their chances of even a tie by winning the 175-pound scrap.

Garza Down Twice

That affair, though little more exciting than five bouts that came before and one afterward, was a good yardstick of the action throughout. Conlon, a 6-foot-4 giant with a trip-hammer right, stood toe to toe wtih Columbus' Romeo Garza and flailed away from start to finish. Twice he knocked his swarthy foe to the canvas, almost went down himself in the second session, and finally got the decision despite Garza's bruising third-round rally.

The heavyweight business that followed cut Columbus' deficit, but not enough. In that one Al McAlear, Explorer rookie, flattened Warren Trotter in the first round but took a lot of punishment before the final bell. Most of the time the boys stood in center ring, tossing alternate rights and lefts without stopping.

Light 'Gators Good

Florida clearly had the edge in lighter battles. The 120-pound bout went to Al Young without dissent, after a rousing fight with Jack Golumb. The class of the 'Gator squad turned up in 135-pound Johnny Joca, who pounded Sam Tytelman at will but couldn't finish him. The latter rested out a nine-count in the first round.

Columbus finally scored with a booed decision in the 145-pound division. Bernie Jackson bulled Art Kaplan around in that one, was rocked by a series of long rights toward the end but apparently pleased the judges. His 155-pound mate, Elmer Jacobsen, wasn't so fortunate, however, running into Jimmy Taylor and losing after one of the most hilarious slugfests the city has seen.

To Charley Cox, raw-boned 165-pounder, went Columbus' most clear - cut decision. Aggressive throughout, he staggered Bob Cromwell in the final three minutes and won fairly easily.

COMPLETE RESULTS

120 POUNDS—Young (F) decisioned Golumb.
127 POUNDS—Goss (F) won, forfeit over Taub.
135 POUNDS—Joca (F) decisioned Tytelman.
145 POUNDS—Jackson (C) decisioned Kaplan.
155 POUNDS—Taylor (F) decisioned Jacobsen.
165 POUNDS—Cox (C) decisioned Cromwell.
175 POUNDS—Conlon (F) decisioned Garza.

Sugar Bowl Rams Presented Trophies

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Forty-five members of the Fordham football team that defeated Missouri, 2 to 0, in the Sugar Bowl game on January 1 were the guests of honor at a banquet tonight and received individual trophies emblematic of the triumph.

A. N. Goldberg, president of the New Orleans Midwinter Sports Association, made the presentations. He also awarded the huge Sugar Bowl trophy to the school. It was accepted by the Very Rev. Robert I. Gannon, president.

Dizzy Dean Considering A Comeback

By the Associated Press

Lancaster, Tex., Feb. 9.—The baseball future of the Dean brothers, Dizzy and Paul, still is clouded.

Dizzy said today he is making plans to continue his work as a radio announcer at St. Louis, although he may make another effort to get his arm back in shape.

The former Chicago Cub and St. Louis Cardinal right-hander said he was going to Hot Springs, Ark., Saturday to discuss with William Clark, athletic director of the Philadelphia Broadmoor Club, a conditioning program designed to bring his ailing flipper back to life.

He added that he would let them work on his arm "as long as it don't cost anything, but I wouldn't want to return to baseball unless I knew the arm could be completely cured and I could win ball games like I used to."

Paul, who owns a farm across the county from Dizzy, said he would not be interested in playing ball unless it was with Dallas of the Texas League. He quit last year when the Cardinals wanted to sign him to the Pacific Coast League.

"Playing with Dallas ought to be a good setup for me," grinned Paul. "I could do the milking early in the morning, run my filling station in the daytime and pitch for Dallas at night."

Northwestern Bows

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 9 (AP).—Purdue University's Boilermakers downed the Northwestern Wildcats, 50 to 41, tonight to keep pace in the race for the Big Ten basketball championship. The victory was their fifth in eight conference games.

Costantino Wins 52d Pro Fight

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 9.—Charley (Lulu) Costantino, local featherweight title prospect, ran his unbeaten professional fistic string to 52 fights in a row tonight by outpointing former Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald in a tough slugging eight-rounder before a crowd of 3000 fans at St. Nicholas Palace.

Giving himself a party on the eve of his twentieth birthday, the undefeated youngster had too much reach and punching power for the veteran from Providence, R. I., but in turning in his most important victory to date, he had anything but a soft touch. The Associated Press score card gave him five of the eight rounds.

The candy store clerk—Constantino works in his father's shop in his spare time—had a lot of trouble solving Archibald's weaving style and rush-in-rush-out-again tactics, but he more than made up for it when he did connect. His best punch of the fight was a hammering left hook in the final chapter which shook the New Englander. A right which followed opened a small cut on Joey's left eye.

For his part Archibald clicked several times with long hooks and ccasionally led off with a right hand to the head, mostly while Lulu was sparring around while holding his fists down near his sides, for which his handlers berated him continually.

Constantino traded in his amateur card for a punch-for-pay career some two years ago and never has lost a fight.

Major Polo Tournaments Are Canceled

By the United Press

New York, Feb. 9.—Polo, the sport always hit hardest by war, has quietly canceled its three major tournaments for 1942 and mapped most remaining competition along informal lines.

This was disclosed today by a spokesman of the United States Polo Association, who estimated for the United Press, that "about 80 per cent" of the country's 18,000 polo players already have entered service.

He said that the association's board of governors, at its last meeting, had called off the three most important tournaments: The National Open championship, scheduled for Meadow Brook Club, Westbury, N. Y., in early September; the national 20-goal championship, slated for August at a site to have been selected, and the national intercircuit and 12-goal title tourney, which would have been held at a suitable club in July.

Colleges May Play

A survey of the college polo situation will be made in April to determine whether the national intercollegiate championship shall be held in May.

Meanwhile, some indoor competition will be staged, such as the Sherman Memorial medium-goal tourney at the Pegasus Club, Rockleigh, N. J., starting February 21, and the Eastern Intercollegiates at West Point, N. Y., March 7.

Virtually all other play will be on an informal basis, with matches staged throughout the country for benefit of the Red Cross and service organizations. The association, which canceled its championship in 1917 and 1918 and raised thousands of dollars at informal matches for war organizations, hopes to do likewise this time.

Polo always is hit hard by war because most of the country's players are of service age, comparatively independent financially and usually men who have received military training or are receiving it at colleges.

Many in Service

Well-known players already in service include George Oliver, Charles von Stade, Devereux Milburn, jr., and his brother Jack, James P. Mills, Raymond Guest, John R. Fell and the Gerrys—Edward, Henry and Robert L., jr. Stewart Iglehart, a ten-goaler, is engaged in manufacturing defense materials, but expects the Government to permit him to enter aviation this summer. Famous Tommy Hitchcock, now 42, also has applied for aviation but probably will be kept on the ground. When 17, Tommy was in the Lafayette Escadrille, was shot down behind the lines and escaped from a German prison camp.

In the current war, Hasketh H. Hughes, who played No. 1 for Great Britain against the United States in 1936 and was an alternate in 1939, was killed at Dunkerque. Lord John Cowdray, nonplaying manager of the 1939 British team, lost an arm at Dunkerque, and it is reported without confirmation that Gerald Balding, No. 3 on the 1939 team, has been wounded more recently.

Phil Furr Beaten Again—This Time By Deacon Brown

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 9.—Deacon Johnny Brown survived a first-round knockdown to punch out a 10-round decision tonight over Phil Furr, Washington welterweight.

Furr felled Brown with a short left hook to the chin, but it was Brown's fight the rest of the way. Furr ended the battle with a cut over the eye and badly puffed face. Brown weighed 160¼; Furr, 153½.

Great Lakes Defeated by Notre Dame

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Notre Dame grabbed the lead early in the second half tonight, held onto it by three or four points the rest of the way, and defeated the Great Lakes Naval Training Station quintet, 46-43. A crowd of 12,236 witnessed the Navy Relief Fund game in the Chicago Stadium.

The Irish, with four sophomores in the starting lineup, avenged the 52-46 beating the sailors gave them in their second basketball game of the season. More important, the Notre Dame quintet became the fourth team to beat the powerful band of Great Lakes ex-collegians who have taken 21 decisions.

Notre Dame, which had won 11 games previously without the benefit of any single star, forged with No. 12 operating on the same principle. Lads who helped the Irish cause along with baskets and free throws at crucial points were Bobby Rensberger, Johnny Niemiera and Francis Quinn.

Rensberger, only non-sophomore on the starting Irish five, was high scorer with 16 points, followed by Niemiera with 13.

The lead changed hands three times and was twice tied in the first half, but the sailors, due to great work by Ernie Andres, formerly of Indiana; Bob Calihan, former Detroit U. star, and Frank Baumholtz, who played for Ohio University, led at the half, 26-24.

Notre Dame took over the lead at 31-30 in the second half and held on to the finish, but never pulled more than four points away from the scrapping sailors.

George Case 16th Nat to Sign 1942 Contract

George Case, the only holdover from last year's CCC outfield, Case-Cramer-Chapman, signed his 1942 contract with the Nats yesterday, Secretary Edward Eynon announced.

Case was the sixteenth Washington player to sign, his papers following those of Mickey Vernon, the first sacker, received the day previous.

13,000 See Long Island Five Triumph

Colonials Only Single Point From Tie in New York Battle; Shooting Way Off

New York, Feb. 9.—St. John's College nosed out George Washington by the score of 50 to 46 in the first game of a twin-bill basketball at Madison Square Garden tonight. More than 13,000 persons witnessed the game.

In the nightcap of the doubleheader Long Island University downed Duquesne, 44 to 34.

The Redmen, seeking their seventh victory over the Colonials, played speedily in the first half and were fortunate to have a 23 to 17 lead at intermission. This was attributable as much to the Capital team's bad shooting as it was to anything St. John's did.

While the Colonials were missing an amazing string of shots, St. John's built up an early 7-1 advantage. Then it fumbled around and subsequently the score was tied at 7, 8 and 10 before a 5-point Indian spurt gave the Brooklyn lads a lead it held the rest of the way.

Tied at 27-All

Three baskets within a minute and then another spurt of five points moved the Colonials into a tie at 27-all just after the clock had ticked off four minutes. It was tied again at 29 before half a minute had elapsed, then St. John's, scoring while the Colonials were missing, stuck in eight points in a row. The Washington half of a double foul put the visitors in the scoring and then Milhaven's driving dribble made the score 39 to 30 for the Indians with the period half gone.

George Washington got hold of itself at this juncture and, Rausch and Reichwein providing the drive, moved up until the Colonials were only a point behind, 40 to 39. Then Slim Baxter poured in two set shots in quick succession and St. John's moved away. The Brooklynites were leading, 45 to 41, with five minutes to go. While all this was going on, George Washington lost two men on fouls, Rausch and Zunic.

Long Island, chalking up its nineteenth victory in 21 contests, pulled away after the first ten minutes to lead, 26-11, at the intermission. Duquesne, with Bill Goggin and Stan Noszka setting the pace, narrowed the gap 9 points within five minutes after the second period started but got no closer. The Rader twins scored 28 points for the Blackbirds.

Moon Maiden, Brann 4-Year-Old, Wins Hialeah Feature

Transient, Day's Choice, Runs Second

Inscolassie Takes Show; Maryland-Bred Mare Turns Tables On Recent Conqueror

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 9.—As if the impressive race run by Challedon Saturday signalized a return to good fortune for the W. L. Brann banner bearers, Moon Maiden, a less illustrious stable companion of "chally," today accounted for feature honors in the Marianna purse. The Maryland-bred 4-year-old scored by a length and a half in the six and a half furlong test for fillies and mares, witnessed by a crowd of 10,037.

The Brann colorbearer reversed the decision over her recent conqueror, Mrs. Vera S. Bragg's Transient, an odds-on favorite today. The latter was picking up an additional 9 pounds while Moon Maiden carried the same weight she had before. Third money went to Herbert M. Woolf's Inscolassie, another two lengths back. The winner, paying $5.80, was timed in 1:18 1-5.

Eligible for Widener

In their previous clash, Transient had administered a three-length licking to Moon Maiden. Despite the unfavorable weight shift today, Mrs. Bragg's filly was backed down to odds of 7 to 10. Of the five in this afternoon's headliner, three are eligible for next Saturday's $5000-added, 7-furlong Evening Handicap—Moon Maiden, Transient and Sister Union.

Transient and Moon Maiden raced just behind Sister Union for almost 3 furlongs, then they passed the early leader in the bunched battle for command approaching the stretch turn. Moon Maiden drew into a daylight lead as they began the run home. She was kept under pressure by Ken McCombs to hold Transient safe. Inscolassie, which had not started since midsummer of 1940, closed gamely to be an easy third over Sister Union and Maemante.

At The Post

Selections at Hialeah

Dear Al:

Only a rare few ever have mentioned Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, Bob Smith and viosterole in connection with Alsab, the favorite for the sixty-eighth running of the Kentucky Derby on May 2. Yet, if it hadn't been for these three—a lady, a gentleman and a medicine—there would not have been an Alsab. Mrs. Sloane, owner of Brookmeade Stable, owned a sire, Neddie, which was bred to the French mare, Brocatelle. The result was a sickly, scrawny colt. Ordinary nourishment aided him but little, and, as the weeks wore along, he became emaciated, and appeared to be dying of malnutrition. Bob Smith, then trainer for Brookmeade, tried all the medicines at his command—without result. Mrs. Sloane grew interested in the youngster, and, in their struggles to bring him to health, Bob and Mrs. Sloane became fond of the little fellow, who seemed always to bespeak his appreciation with his adoring eyes, and his gentle manner. There came a time, finally, when a veterinarian felt that the cause of the colt was hopeless; that the most humane thing to do would be to destroy him. But Mrs. Sloane, who had read about the fine work done for undernourished children in the Emergency Hospital, in Washington, D. C., told Smith to go there and find out if the medicine used for children would help animals. Smith went to Washington and asked questions. The name of the medicine? Oh, yes, viosterole. Let's see now—this medicine was building up sickly children, giving them appetites for food that built them into health and strength? Yes, they told Smith, that's what viosterole was doing. Would it help a sickly horse? Well, they wouldn't really be knowing about that—they specialized in treating humans. But it wouldn't harm the horse—of that they were sure. So Bob Smith put in an order for several hundred viosterole capsules, went back to Mrs. Sloane's breeding establishment in Upperville, Va., and proceeded to dole out the pills to the colt. Soon the colt, perked up, began to have a fine appetite, put on weight, and developed eventually into a race horse, which, while not a champion, won some high-class stake races. His name was Good Goods. After his racing days were done, Good Goods was shipped to the breeding farm of Thomas Piatt, in Kentucky. It is possible that Mrs. Sloane, who is in partnership with Piatt in the ownership of various stallions, retained an interest in Good Goods. But it was Piatt who mated Good Goods with a little known mare, Winds Chant, by Wildair, and the consequence was Alsab, rated off his 2-year-old form, in 1941, as the best youngster since the reign of Man o' War. BILL.

First race—DREAMY EYES was beaten only three-quarters of a length last out. That good race repeated will be right there in this baby affair. CIRCLE RANCH entry and STEER CLEAR will be real factors.

Second race—BRIGHT ARC has the early foot to be right there. REMOTE CONTROL is the one to beat. MATTIE J. and COFFMAN will be fighting it out for the show end.

Third race—VOTUM'S last good race is needed to down this field. POMIVA. CREPE. BOY ANGLER and SPECIFY all figure close up this way weighted.

Fourth race—PIG TAILS will like this three-quarters and his last race was a nice effort. RODNEY is the one to whip. RED THORN and EIRE for the rest of the purse.

Fifth race—ROYAL MAN'S best race is needed in this tough wide-open event. IN QUESTION, OLYMPUS and WALLER will be right there off their best form.

Sixth race—DISPOSE was short last out and likes this track. SIGNATOR, ZACATINE and BEST SELLER all figure close up.

Seventh race—ROBERT E. LEE looks like the standout bet of the doy off his last good race. GREEDAN for the place honors. WAUGH POP and GEORGE LEMAZE for the show end.

Eighth race—KING'S ERROR should trim this kind. VEILED PROPHET, LOU BRIGHT and BESS B. have good outside chances if the top one doesn't run to best form.

Best bet—ROBERT E. LEE.

18 Horses Named For Evening 'Cap

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—Eighteen horses have been named for the $5000 added Evening Handicap—the next-to-the-biggest race of the winter for fillies and mares—at Hialeah Park Saturday.

The Evening Handicap and the $10,000 Black Helen March 2 both were named in honor of highly successful fillies, Joseph E. Widener's Evening and E. R. Bradley's Black Helen.

Every outstanding filly or mare at Hialeah is eligible for the Evening, including the stakes winners Sweet Willow, Cis Marion, Cute Trick, Pretty Pet, Pig Tails and Iscoolda.

Winners of lesser events include Dark Discovery, Belle Poise, Transient, One Jest, Sister Union, Kasidah, Button Hole and Sylvestra

Novice Boxers To Get Break In A.A.U. Meet

Veteran amateur fighters who have enough experience to compete in the senior division but prefer to remain among less experienced boys will be required to move up into the older bracket in the District A. A. U. boxing tournament, scheduled at Turner's Arena February 20, Chairman Billy Blake of the ring committee announced last night.

In disclosing that Turner's would be the scene of the big biffing shindig, Blake also made known that the committee in charge had moved to clear out much deadwood cluttering up novice ranks and give less experienced boys a better chance of winning the laurels.

"Pete Celinski, of St. Mary's Boys Club, won a senior title without even going through the novice division," Blake said last night. "He whipped Danny Petro, one of the toughest kids in the game, for the title, and if he could do that I don't think it's asking too much of these perennial novices to fight in their proper classes."

The ruling will affect not only novice winners and runners-up in the 1941 A. A. U. tournament but also champions and second-bests in the recent Golden Gloves competition. The new regulation is expected to increase interest in both divisions and lure fresh talent into activity.

The A. A. U.'s decision to award handsome championship belts with gold buckles, faithful reproductions of belts worn by oldtime champs and still awarded by Ring Magazine to modern-day champions, has met with the unanimous approval of all amateurs who have seen the belt. Other prizes will be awarded but the belts replace the old medals, symbolic of the title.

Tentative plans call for five consecutive weeks of fighting but this will be reduced to four if possible. Increased interest in boxing indicates the heaviest entry list in the history of the affair and if the committee's efforts are not in vain it should be one of the most successful.

Former Champion Of Peru to Race At Hialeah Today

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9.—A. T. Jergins' Meissen, former champion of Peru, today was named for his first North American start tomorrow in a $1500 7-furlong race at Hialeah Park for older horses.

In 19 races, Meissen won 15 times—including a dead heat—finished second twice and third twice.

Foaled October 31, 1936, Meissen did not start as a 2-year-old but had a brilliant 3-year-old record and earned 41,070 pesos.

Jergins, director of the Hollywood Turf Club, bought the horse with a view to starting him in the Hollywood Gold Cup. Meissen was brought here when winter racing in California was canceled.

Competition tomorrow will be furnished by nine horses, including Dispose—winner last year of the Flamingo and Bahamas Stakes for 3-year-olds.

Phils Sign Pitcher, 2 Fielders for 1947

Philadelphia, Feb. 9 (AP).—Joe Marty, veteran outfielder; Gene Lambert, rookie pitcher, and Bill Burich, rookie second sacker, have signed to play for the Phils this year, the club announced today.

Table Tennis Tourney Draws Many Entries

Post Championship for Government Workers Set for Ice Palace This Weekend

Government workers in Washington and vicinity apparently are table tennis conscious, judging from the large number of entries received at the Ice Palace in response to announcement of the second annual Washington Post-Government Employes Tournament scheduled to get under way at the Chevy Chase courts Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

With close to 40 entries already received, the tournament is destined to run neck-and-neck with the record turnout of 172 last February. Designed by Lou Fields, table tennis manager at the Ice Palace, to give the novice a run for his or her money, the more expert player has not been overlooked and each will be placed in a classification commensurate with the player's ability.

The entry fee of 40 cents entitles the entrant to ample practice periods and continued play even though eliminated in early rounds. Handsome trophies will be given winners in each class.

Schedule of Play

The preliminaries start Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with finals scheduled for Sunday afternoon and night. Players may enter the Saturday afternoon or night session(s) according to the time released from work, but it is suggested that the entry coupon on this page be filled out and mailed to the Ice Palace as quickly as possible in order that tournament officials may make up the draw to suit the needs of each participant.

Bill Pierce, men's champion of last year, was forced to step down from his throne because of Army service, so a new king of the Government services will be crowned this year. Polly Woolsey, women's champion, is reportedly ready to defend her honors. Because so many of the men paddlers are in the armed services, Fields is looking for an exceptionally large turnout of women.

Names of the last entrants received are E. St. James, Terry Epter, Maurice Shire, Alan Gottlieb, Carl Blackwell, Odell Waldby, Al Wheeler, Morton Fichel, Larry Lefley, Eddie Gee, Toni Sabatino, J. J. Parker, J. Burnight, Jules Bernard, Paul Hoffman, J. R. Massengold and J. Stewart.

Detroit Five Faces Albany in Opener

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP). The world champion Detroit Eagles drew the Albany Senators of the New York State League as opening opponent Friday in the $2500 Eastern professional basketball tournament.

Other pairings announced tonight: Glens Falls Lions vs. McDonalds, West New York, N. J.; Saratoga Indians, vs. Riverhead, Long Island, Police, and Harlem Yankees, vs. Pittsburgh Pirates.

The semifinals will be played Saturday and the final and consolation game Sunday.

Lions Reject Offer for 3 Forwards

The player quest of T. P. Gorman, general manager of Les Canadiens, ended in failure, it was revealed yesterday, with Manager Lee Perrin refusing a check for three of the Washington Lions.

The players, all forwards, are Lou Trudel, "Polly" Drouin and "Peggy" O'Neil.

Perrin, in announcing the Lions' regrets, said the Lions management could have turned over a quick profit by disposal of the three men, but that he and owner Mike Uline are more interested in the team's chance to gaining the American Hockey League play-offs.

The Lions' general manager also stressed the fact that he believes in preparing for next season.

Trudel, Drouin and O'Neil, who have seen service with the Canadiens (and thus are well known to Gorman), are all in a position where their services will not be needed by the military forces for quite a while.

Hepped up over the coming play-offs and the fact that they have scored three shutout victories in their last four games, the Lions are awaiting their crucial game at New Haven on Thursday night. New Haven is tied for second place with Providence with 37 points each, and the Lions are only five points below. Top three teams in the Eastern and Western divisions win places in the American League play-off.

Eagles Battle Olympic Six Here Tonight

A chance to regain a firm hold on fourth place, as well as the prospect of slapping down one of their bitterest rivals, will be enjoyed by the Washington Eagles tonight when they skate onto Riverside Stadium's ice to meet the leading Boston Olympics in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League clash at 8:30.

If the arch foes duplicate their last meeting here, considerable excitement may develop for a crowd which is expected to reach sell-out proportions. In that engagement the Olympics, protesting a major penalty issued Ty Anderson, walked off the ice and threatened to quit play. They finally returned, took a 7-6 decision, but were handed a $100 fine for the performance.

Top place in the standings is now held by the Olympics, but in the Eagles they face the only club in the circuit which has a favorable record in games with them. So far locals have won three out of six games and tied one.

Five key players will be missing from the invaders' line-up in tonight's game, with the possibility that the number will be six tonight. Goalie Vic Polich yesterday was forced to visit his home town in Minnesota to appeal a draft call, and thus Gerry Cosby, former New York Rover player, may be pressed into the visitors' net.

MacPhail, Viewing With Alarm, Bans Golf for Dodgers

Brooklyn's Boss Frowns On Publicity

Head of Ball Players' Annual Meet Predicts Affair 'Will Not Be Affected' by Decree

By the Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 9.—President Larry MacPhail has forbidden the Brooklyn Dodgers to compete in the annual Baseball Players' Golf Tournament starting at Miami Wednesday, but George R. Jacobus, director of the event, says it won't make much difference anyway.

Manager Leo Durocher disclosed MacPhail's instructions here today. "After all, a lot of major golf tournaments have been cancelled by the men who make their living at it, and Mr. MacPhail didn't think the Brooklyn Dodgers should play in any tournaments," Durocher explained.

"This country is at war. Besides, we are down here to go into spring training and Mr. MacPhail didn't think the Dodgers should be connected with any unnecessary publicity like golf tournaments."

MacPhail's orders eliminated Durocher, Joe Medwick and Ted McGrew, all Sarasota winter residents, from the tournament.

Jacobus, recalling that no Dodger had ever won the event, said "I am very sorry. It won't affect the tourney much, though, as we were only expecting Durocher, McGrew and Medwick to enter anyway. The Dodgers are the only club to take such a stand."

At Miami, city officials telegraphed MacPhail explaining that proceeds of the event will go to the Red Cross and urging him to change his mind.

Paul Derringer, Cincinnati Reds' pitcher who is a member of the players' committee, also said he planned to telephone MacPhail and ask him to permit the Dodgers to play.

The Miami tournament will be 72 holes. Tournaments for the baseballers have been match play events. Merv Shea, coach of the St. Louis Browns, won last year. Other former winners include Wes Ferrell, Paul Waner and Sam Byrd.

Women's Western Golf Group Votes On Full Program

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Directors of the Women's Western Golf Association voted today to carry out a full program of events for the 1942 season, giving war savings stamps and bonds as prizes.

The Open championship, which will attract the top flight professionals and amateurs, will be played over the links of suburban Elmhurst County Club, June 22 to 27.

The Junior championship, restricted to girls under 18, will be played at the Town and Country Club, St. Paul, Minn., July 13 to 17, while the 72-hole derby was awarded to the Sunset Ridge Country Club, Chicago, August 10 to 13.

National City Tops Brethren

National City courtmen hung up the highest total of the night in the Central High branch of the D. C. Recreation League, beating United Brethren, 57-27. McIntyre was high scorer with 15 points for the winners.

Petworth defeated Eastern Presbyterian, 35-25, with C. Jones making 15 points while Francis Asbury was just shy of a double-score total in beating Douglas, 32-17. Calvary Methodist won over Calvary Baptist, 33-12, and Mount Vernon beat Epiphany, 39-30, despite Walsh's 14 points. Luckett dropped in 17 points as Ninth Street Church topped Chevy Chase, 34-22.

G. A. P. A. took the only close game of the night in the Roosevelt section, over Washington Blue Jays, 24-23. Cardoza won over A. G. O. Extension, 30-16, and Colonials over Sixth Presbyterian, 26-20.

Hoyas Face St. Joseph Five in Philadelphia

G. U. Seeks Seventh Victory in Quaker City; Catholic U. Invades Towson for Teacher Game

Georgetown will try once again to boost it's season's won and lost record above the .500 mark tonight when the Hoyas play their fourth road game in the last seven days against St. Joseph's in Philadelphia.

Victories over Colgate and Marquette against a defeat by Syracuse on last week's East and Midwest trip gave the Hoyas a 6 won and 6 lost standing for the year as they passed the halfway mark of one of the toughest schedules among the Nation's college courtmen.

St. Joseph's, Temple's usual partner in the Philadelphia Garden double-headers, will be host to the Hoyas in the St. Joe's gym. The hosts have been faring fairly well in intersectional competition and on their home court will rule slight favorites over the Ripleymen.

The Hawks beat C. C. N. Y. by 14 points on the same Madison Square Garden program that found Long Island beating Georgetown. They lost to the towering West Texas State team by only a 59-56 margin.

Georgetown will play one of its most attractive home games of the season Thursday against Duquesne, which met Long Island in New York last night.

Catholic University, the most active team in the Mason-Dixon Conference, will pick on the lowly Maryland State Teachers five in Towson tonight. The Teachers have lost seven straight in league competition and have won only 2 out of 13 for the season. The game should provide Dick Scanlon and Freddy Rice, jr., an opportunity to maintain their 1-2 pace in the conference individual scoring department.

C. U. will return home tomorrow night for the first of two intracity battles of the week. The Cards entertain a highly favored Columbus club and then Friday visit American University. Maryland goes to Annapolis tomorrow to test Navy in an afternoon attraction.

MacWilliams, Smith Pace Navy Bowlers

When Tom Smith, Broadsides, and Heber MacWilliams, Miscellaneous, banged out respective totals of 154 and 398 in the Navy Yard Loop at Fort Davis they finished on top of the heap and the latter's count aided his team in garnering high set with 1816. Tool No. 2 took high team game after a 647 effort. Miscellaneous, Drawing Room No. 3 and F. & A. No. 1 are deadlocked for the league lead, the first named, however, having the greater pinfall.

ARCADIA

The Navy Department boys found that Andy Anderson was top expert among them with a 142 game and 389 set, with his Model Basin quintet sharing honors after high pinfalls of 577 and 1715.

CLARENDON

Little Chick Darr showed the boys in the Clarendon Commercial "A" League about duckpinning last night, leading the loop with a 149 single and 376 set for his I. N. Miller team. The Hollywood Cleaners finished first among the teams, posting totals of 599-1745 to whitewash Furniture Mart and take undisputed possession of top position. Columbia Specialty and Clarendon Fire Department also scored sweeps over opponents.

ICE PALACE

Frank Riley, Eldbrooke, had 166-421 and Teammate Marty Derrick tossed in a 418 set to spark their team to highs of 620 and 1521 in the Friendship Church League. The Eldbrooke boys blasted Chevy Chase Baptists out of the lead by virtue of a three-game sweep with Presbyterian No. 1 taking over.

2 Cards Pace Mason-Dixon Scoring Race

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 9.—Catholic University's two scoring twins, Center Dick Scanlan and Guard Fred Rice, jr., remained in front of the Mason-Dixon Basketball Conference individual scoring rate today, while there was some juggling around in other "Big Ten" places.

Scanlan made 25 points in two games last week, while Rice was notching up 19, giving the Flying Cardinal center a 10-game total of 119 points and the high-scoring guard 108.

At the same time, Ed Mogowski of Western Maryland remained in third place, where he was a week ago, with an eight-game total of 97 points. And still in fourth spot is Mount St. Mary's Capt. Bill Harkins, with 94. A week ago Mogowski nad 87 and Harkins, 85. The Mounts are in second place in the league standings with six wins against three defeats.

Bock Boosts His Stock

The biggest jump in positions over last week was by Vic Bock, one of the sparkplugs of the conference-leading Loyola Greyhounds. Bock, seventh a week ago with 75 points, warmed the netting with 23 points as Loyola trimmed Washington College Saturday night, and ran his individual effort to 86 points in seven contests.

Bud Tannebaum, Johns Hopkins scoring star, skidded from fifth to seventh, when the Blue Jays were idle in the conference. He has 82 points in seven games.

Bernie Thobe, another of the main cogs in the Loyola attack, held with a total of 85 points compared with 73 a week ago.

The top ten had one newcomer to the ranks, Frank Samele, of Washington College's Shoremen. Samele, who has climbed into third place in the State scoring scramble for all games, conference and non-conference, is eighth in the league rating with 74. The Washington forward has 132 points and Nat Winitsky, of Baltimore University, 148. Travis leads the pack with 231 and Winitsky is second with 149.

Flood Holds Position

Jim Flood, star sophomore center of Mount St. Mary's, held his ninth place in the Mason-Dixon scoring battle with 68 points, compared with 55 last week. In tenth spot, where he was a week ago, is Loyola's other Bock brother, Franny, with an even 60 points. Franny had 54 last week.

Because Johns Hopkins played no conference games during the week, the Blue Jay center, Bill Robinson, was eighth with 59 points, dropped into eleventh, one point ahead of Carl Byham, center of American University's Eagles.

And now that the boys are setting into the stretch, it will be interesting to watch the week's tilts from the individual scoring angle—although the coaches won't agree on the value of a player dancing away to help his average while forgetting teamwork.

Catholic U., Loyola, and Washington College all have two Mason-Dixon games this week. The conference schedule:

Tuesday—Catholic at Towson; Wednesday, Johns Hopkins at Loyola; Friday—Washington at Mount St. Mary's, Randolph-Macon at Bridgewater, Catholic at American U.; Saturday—Delaware at Washington College, Loyola at Western Maryland.

A scheduled tilt between Mount St. Mary's and Randolph-Macon at Ashland Saturday has been canceled.

D. C. Man Named To Duckpin Group

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Feb. 9.—A. L. Ebersole, of Washington, D. C., executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, has been appointed to serve on the advisory committee of the Hale American Bowling Council, Jack M. Willem, of Chicago, United States bowling coordinator, announced here today.

Ebersole, Willem said, will direct the activity of duckpin bowlers in the Nation-wide movement to send men, women and youngsters to bowling centers to roll their way to physical fitness.

The bowling program is sponsored by the physical fitness division, Office of Civilian Defense.

College Cagers:

G. W. U. Five Beaten by the Best, Anyhow

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Three of George Washington's defeats to date have come from leaders of three of the Nation's major conferences: Oklahoma Aggies, likely winner of the Missouri Valley; Oklahoma U., pacesetter of the Big Six, and Duke, unbeaten in the Southern Conference. In addition Indiana has a slight chance to win the Big Ten and St. John's has one of New York's best records. . . . Al Lujack the football player who has sparked Georgetown's comeback of late, was a high school opponent of Matt Zunic, of G. W. Lujack broke Chick Hyatt's Pennsylvania scholastic scoring record but has favored football at the Hilltop. . . . Catholic University's victory over Gallaudet snapped a losing streak which found the Cards scoring 33 points in three consecutive games, and losing all.

George Lentz, the G. W. trainer, has taken over the local agency for a new type brace which has proven invaluable to athletes handicapped by bad knees . . . Ernie Travis, Maryland's leading scorer, has played all of his finest games away from home . . . Maryland is definitely out of the running for a Southern Conference championship berth, even if they win all remaining games . . . Georgetown's unbeaten freshmen, averaging 58 points a game to date, meet Aberdeen Proving Grounds, victor over several college clubs including Lehigh, Lafayette and Western Maryland, February 23 in the G. U. gym. The Aberdeen club played Duquesne in Pittsburgh with only a seven-man squad and three men were hurt in the course of the game. They had only four men available in the last quarter so the Duquesne coach also played with four. The ball game was even up at the time, but the Dukes finally won by 10 points . . . Columbus University has ideas about meeting George Washington for charity, but on the face of it the game would be a mismatch. The Explorers could only beat St. Francis, a team without a victory, by 1 and 2 points and lost to Potomac State.

The advertised 23,000 crowd for the Georgetown-Marquette and De Paul-Loyola game Saturday night in Chicago was only 6300, but there is an explanation. The C. Y. O. promoters got a mad on with the Chicago Garden management after the rent was hiked and the game was shifted to a West Side gym. The thousands who had tickets were admitted on a first-come, first served basis. Doors were closed long before game time and they were crowding the floor and hanging on the rafters to see the thrillers, G. U., 35; Marquette, 34; Loyola, 52; De Paul, 51.

Little Man Who Wasn't So Hot Comes Through for California

By the Associated Press

Berkeley, Calif., Feb. 9.—Crew Coach Ky Ebright of California stared again and with a fine disregard for grammar, muttered, "It ain't so, I don't believe it."

There it was anyhow—a check for $1250 to buy a new rowing shell for the university.

The check, received today, was from George McKee Blair, in training with the U. S. Navy Air Corps at Pensacola, Fla. Interwoven with the piece of paper is the story of a former student who thinks crew racing is the greatest college sport of all.

As a sophomore last year, Blair rowed No. 7 oar in California's third varsity boat. Being somewhat short and stocky he was not tabbed as a red hot prospect. Crew coaches search for the towering boys with whipcord muscles.

What Blair lacked in size, however, he made up for in spirit. He was the most willing worker on the water. He failed to return to school last fall and with the exception of Coach Ebright and his staff, not many remembered he had ever been around.

Last summer, Blair, whose home is in Sewickley, Pa., enlisted in the Navy Air Corps. To Ebright today he wrote:

"I wanted to do something for crew at California so please find inclosed amount necessary to buy a new shell."

The new craft will bear the name: "George Blair."

Riders Host To Central; Tech Visits

Their next-to-last day of squabbling for places in the public school championship tournament next weekend finds interhigh cagers locked in two games today, neither of which makes much difference in the standing but both of which promise action a-plenty.

At Roosevelt it will be the Riders against Central at 3:30. Down on the flats the Indians of Anacostia take on Tech at the same time, the winner achieving nothing except the pleasure of pushing the loser into the interhigh basement.

Roosevelt, largely because of its undefeated record, is expected to whip the Vikings, though that won't hurt or help the playoff chances of either. The Riders have already clinched a tourney berth, and Central can ride into the championship meet on a Western triumph over Coolidge when those two teams tangle in the round robin finale Friday. On the same bill Wilson is expected to complete the ruin of Eastern's season.

Phil Rizzuto Signs; Yankees Send Him South

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 9.—Phil Rizzuto, shortstop of the world champion New York Yankees, limped into the office of President Ed Barrow today and left smiling a few minutes later with the announcement that he had signed his 1942 contract. He is the first Yank regular to sign.

Rizzuto, who lives in the metropolitan area, injured an ankle recently while skating.

The youngster, who climaxed his first year in the big leagues by starring in the World Series, also has been ill with the flu during the past month, and Barrow ordered him South with the first Yank contingent in hopes of regaining his lost poundage.

Hank Borowy, pitcher, and Catcher Ken Sears, both up from Newark, of the International League, returned their signed contracts, as did Melvin Queen, speedball hurler, who was with Kansas City, in the American Association and Binghamton, of the Eastern circuit, last season.

The New York Giants today received the signed contracts of Coach Adolf Luque and Pitcher Fiddler Bill McGee. Luque was a coach with the club last season and McGee joined the team in midseason following a trade with the St. Louis Cardinals.

'Pinky' Higgins, in Shape, Pans Off-Season Softies

Agrees With Cobb That All Players Should Retain Pink

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Feb. 9.—Ty Cobb's observations anent ball players shortening their careers by allowing themselves to get fat and soft in off-season receives the whole-hearted indorsement of Michael Franklin (Pinky) Higgins, hard-hitting third baseman of the Detroit Tigers.

Pinky, in top shape and ready to take up where he left off in last season's American League campaign, stretched his 190 pounds and said there was no excuse for a ball player reporting to spring training with a gruelling grind ahead to whip into condition.

"It takes a lot out of a fellow to have to do that and it certainly handicaps him for the season," said Higgins, who keeps in shape with road work—not the kind of road work followed by Joe Louis and others who make their living shoving gloved hands into faces but just plain walking.

Pinky estimates he gets in 10 to 15 miles a day during the hunting season, he fishes a lot and plays golf regularly.

His playing weight is 185, and by the time spring training opens he'll be down to that and ready to take his cut with the most effervescent rookie.

Higgins will be playing his tenth season in the big show. He hasn't received his contract yet, but anticipates no trouble getting together with Detroit.

He believes the Tigers will be better this season than last, when they finished in fourth place. "We hit a slump in midseason but recovered and at the finish were going good," Pinky pointed out. "I think we'll take up where we left off."

PINKY HIGGINS

Higgins, 32, started professional baseball in 1930 when he went from the University of Texas to the Texas League. He next played in the Pacific Coast League, then in 1933 started his major career, all of which has been spent in the American League.

C. & P. Spends $17,017,362 On Expansion

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. spent $17,017,382 in 1941 to meet a breath-taking increase in business, President Lloyd B. Wilson reported yesterday at the annual meeting of stockholders.

Since December 7 (Pearl Harbor) toll calls have been more than 75 per cent heavier than in the same period last year, Mr. Wilson pointed out. He added that the net gain in telephones for the District of Columbia in 1941 was 46,598, "considerably more than the gains in 1940 and 1939 combined."

Local and out-of-town calls increased 12.2 per cent over the previous year, while out-town calls alone in 1941 were 36 per cent heavier than in 1940, he said.

To meet the unprecedented service demand, the C. & P. opened eight new dial offices during the year, making it possible to relieve congestion in certain areas. The cost of these projects were approximately $4,700,000. Another $2,700,000 was spent to meet expansion needs of existing Government agencies and the many new bureaus.

Expenditures for new plant construction, not including plant and material taken out of service and reused, amounted to $14,282,000. Including reused material the total gross additions to plant amounted to $17,017,362, an increase of $7,152,173 over 1940. The book cost of plant serving the District of Columbia at the end of the year was $63,345,263, and about $197 per telephone.

As reported previously, operating revenues increased 18.9 per cent over 1940; operating expenses, including taxes, increased 22.2 per cent.

Operating revenues totaled $15,830,867, while expenses were $13,275,643, leaving net operating income of $2,555,224 available for interest and dividends. Taxes amounted to $1,506,622.

All directors of the company were reelected at the meeting. The directors are: W. W. Everett, Robert V. Fleming, Edwin C. Graham, Gilbert Grosvenor, H. L. Rust, jr., John Saul, Merle Thorpe, of Washington; Fred Lavis, of New York City; and Mr. Wilson, president; John A. Remon, vice president, and Philip O. Coffin, vice president, secretary and treasurer.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns the play of today's hand. The contract is four hearts by South; West leads the queen of spades. How do you play so as to lose no more than three tricks?

The Solution

Declarer made his four-heart contract by an endplay which guarded against an unfavorable placement of opposing club honors. He won the opening lead of the queen of spades with dummy's king and then drew the opponents' trumps in three leads.

He saw that he had no trump losers and that he could ruff his losing spade on the board. He had to give up two diamonds, but if the club honors were divided (which is the normal distribution) he realized he could make the hand by finessing clubs twice. There was a chance, however, that the club king and queen were both unfavorably located in the East hand, so South decided to adopt a different line of play.

He cashed the spade ace, ruffed the small spade in dummy and led a diamond. East won with the king and continued the ace. He then had no safe exit. If he led a third diamond declarer could throw off a club from his hand and trump in dummy. If East led a club, high or low, he would sacrifice a club trick, allowing declarer to take two club tricks and give up only one. South made four hearts, losing two diamonds and a club.

The endplay would work successfully provided West did not hold both ace and king of diamonds, which was not likely, as in this event he probably would have opened the diamond king originally. If West held both diamond honors he could make two leads of clubs through dummy's ace-jack combination and force declarer to give up two club tricks.

West would win the diamond lead with his king and lead a club, East winning. A diamond return would be taken by West's ace and another club lead would defeat declarer.

As long as the diamond honors were divided or East held both, South was sure of making his contract through the endplay. With the honors divided, West could lead once through dummy's clubs, but the next time East would be stuck and would have to play from his remaining high club.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—Active trade and Southern demand resulted in an advance of 50 to 80 cents a bale in cotton today. Contracts were scarce at several periods in the day's trading.

Sentiment toward higher prices was bolstered somewhat by Congressional action at Washington, notably the resolution of Senator Nye to prevent the use of Government-owned surpluses to check farm prices from rising above parity levels.

German Debt Reported at 51 Billion

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Feb. 9.—The German public debt has increased to 128,500,000,000 reichsmarks at the end of 1941 from 37,200,000,000 at the start of the war, Minister of Finance Count Schwerin-Krosigk informed the Berlin Academy for the Administration of War Finances.

This figure "appears absolutely supportable," the Finance Minister said, in view of the rise in the national income from 46 billion reichsmarks in 1933 to 80 billion in 1938, and an estimated 110 billion to 115 billion in 1941.

Schwerin-Krosigk told the academy that control of the national economy at the begining of the war was accompanied by "a radical transformation in the method of financing expenditures," and the government's policy of applying self-increasing taxes and reabsorbing buying power.

It was possible, he said, to cover war expenditures up to 50 per cent by taxation, compared with only 13 per cent before the start of the war, a proportion, he added, "never before achieved by any belligerent country."

The government's income from taxes, the finance chief said, increased from 6,800,000,000 marks in 1933 to more than 32 billion marks in 1941.

One Way to Keep Nazi Debt Down

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Vichy government, by official decree, borrowed another eight billion francs (nominally 160 million dollars) today from the Bank of France to pay continuing costs of the German army of occupation.

The latest loan without interest brought the total advanced by the national bank for occupation expenses to 150 billions (three billion dollars), although a ceiling of 85 billions ($1,700,000,000) had been set in a government decree December 31, 1940. Actual payments to the Germans, however, have totaled more than 210 billion francs ($4,200,000,000).

French sources said the treasury has been so heavily drained that the government has "been forced to resort to printing presses" for money.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—Grain prices fluctuated nervously in an unsettled market today.

Buying orders accumulated over the weekend pushed rye up a cent or more and soybeans about 1½ cents at the start, with other grains gaining fractionally, but after this support was unsaer. Selling, however, was not on a large scale, although wheat dipped to losses of about ½ cent at times and soybeans were off fractions to a cent. Traders blamed some of the market's nervousness on news from Singapore.

Wheat closed unchanged to ½ cent lower compared with Saturday's finish. May 1.28⅛@1.28⅜, July 1.30⅛@1.30¼; corn ¼ to ½ higher, May 86⅝, July 88⅛@88½; oats unchanged to ¼ off; rye ¼ to ⅝ higher; soybeans ⅛ lower to ⅜ up, and lard unchanged to 5 higher.

Year's Income Tops 89 Billion for New Record

The Commerce Department estimated yesterday that Americans received a record income of $89,425,000,000 last year.

This total, which includes wages, dividends, profits and other types, was about $13,700,000,000 more than in 1940 and about seven billion more than in 1929.

Income payments, however, fell below national income last year, which was estimated at more than 92 billion dollars. The principal difference between the two figures is the amount of income produced, but saved by business during the year.

Salaries and wages totaled $59,879,000,000, an increase of 22 per cent. While wages were generally higher and were paid to more people in most fields of labor, the major increase, 39 per cent, occurred in manufacturing industries. Farm income was about 35 per cent higher. Dividends gained 9 per cent. Relief payments were slightly lower.

FPC to Control Expansion of Natural Gas Lines

President Roosevelt signed yesterday legislation broadening the Federal Power Commission's authority over expansion of natural gas facilities.

The measure requires that an FPC certificate of necessity and convenience be obtained to engage in the transportation or sale of natural gas or the extension or acquisition of facilities. Existing law requires such certificates only for new construction or extension of facilities to a market already served by another company.

Senate Approves Planting of Guayule

The Senate completed legislative action yesterday on a measure authorizing the planting of 75,000 acres of land in this country in guayule, rubber-bearing plant.

The chamber agreed to a House amendment limiting planting to United States areas, although it previously had voted to authorize such operations anywhere in the Western Hemisphere.

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, said the State Department had approved the change.

Keep Buses at Maximum Efficiency, Eastman Asks

Operators of the country's 60,000 public passenger buses were asked yesterday by Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation, to keep buses operating at maximum efficiency as "an essential part of the national victory effort."

"Nothing must be permitted to reduce the efficiency of this transportation—especially nothing in the way of inadequate maintenance and repair," Eastman said.

With the letter sent to 4000 bus operators, Eastman mailed a pamphlet on the prevention of breakdowns and service interruptions.

Stocks Stage Mild Retreat In Light Trade

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 9.—The stock market negotiated an orderly retreat today in the face of a somewhat cloudier far Pacific war picture.

Trends slipped at the start and declines ran well over a point or so before a little support appeared. fractional recessions were widely distributed at the close, with scattered leaders a shade above their lows.

Again analysts were encouraged by the fact liquidation was relatively negligible. Transfers of 404,220 shares compared with 431,900 last Friday and were among the smallest since last October. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .5 of a point at 37.4, widest setback for this barometer since January 21.

Lightening of commitments and the withdrawal of bids in many cases was attributed mainly to fears for the outcome of the Singapore siege and some apprehension over Gen. MacArthur's position in the Philippines. A lot of good earnings statements, demonstrating the ability of some companies to overcome big tax charges, aided a few issues, but generally were ignored. An upturn in this week's estimated steel operations was without a great deal of effect.

DuPont dipped to a new low since 1938 and

Whether the gift of gab is an hereditary one remains to be seen. This is merely to report that C. B. S's. well known announcer John Charles Daly is pretty well convinced that it is. It was while John Charles, recently transferred from WJSV, was sleeping late a few mornings ago that his son, John Neal Daly, aged 4, proved it for him. John, junior, put in a long distance call to his grandmother in Washington and talked for a full 20 minutes before he was discovered at his talkative height. Trouble was that there could be no recriminations about the thing. Four-year-old John Neal had been taught while in Washington to remember addresses and his home telephone number in event he became lost. He remembered all too well, and the operator took care of the rest—person-to-person, too.

Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth, who conduct "Vox Pop," which you hear over WJSV and the Columbia network every Monday night, have discovered a new name for their show. It isn't in general use as yet, but they're debating whether they shouldn't rebaptize themselves accordingly. It all stems from the clipping they received from the social column of a small town weekly in the Middle West. It said: "Mr. V. T. Warner and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Horrigan went to Winner Sunday where they visited at the Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Janssen home, returning home Tuesday. Monday evening they took in the broadcast 'The Vice of the People.' They report they enjoyed both the program and their visit to Winner."

Bolles Welcomes Dies Investigation

This Is Wartime

Army Sorry Private Plane Was Fired On

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
BEVERLY KEITH,

By International News Service

Granite City, Ill., Feb. 9.—Terming it a "regrettable incident," but warning that "if civilians don't watch their step accidents like this will happen again," Army authorities tonight pressed their investigation into the machine gunning of a pleasure airplane over a nearby defense area yesterday.

Delbert Henson, 21, of Alton, Ill., was critically wounded when one of the machine-gun bullets entered his abdomen. He was a passenger aboard the plane, along with Beverly Keith, which was struck by at least six bullets as it crossed a defense area occupied by buildings of the Western Cartridge Co. The plane returned safely here.

An official statement said that the machine-gun bullets were fired by guards, including a squadron of United States troops assigned to the area. Unofficial reports said the soldiers fired numerous rounds, at first as a warning but later in earnest. Army officers confined themselves to a statement, issued in Omaha, which said:

"This is wartime, and the public must realize that. Civilians must pay attention to the orders of a sentry. The sentries had orders to shoot, and in this case the guards were merely carrying out their orders."

FBI Has Already Checked His Office For 'Reds,' He Says

Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of the District Defense Council, declared last night he welcomed an investigation of District defense rolls by Representative Martin Dies, who has said he would probe local "Red infiltration" reports.

Replying to an announcement the Dies Committee would subpena the personnel list of paid and unpaid civilian defense volunteers in Washington, Col. Bolles said all his office has been checked by the FBI already.

"We have asked the FBI to check all the rolls," he declared. "We have had our fingerprints taken and our pictures made. All volunteers placed in responsible jobs have been selected carefully."

Dies announced his intention to investigate after he noted one of the city's air-raid wardens was Sarah V. Montgomery, one of last summer's "peace pickets" before the White House. Mrs. Montgomery works at the Interior Department and was investigated for her civilian defense job by Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy.

Society Aids Blood Bank For 4th Year

Miss Nancy Wilbur, president of the Lend a Hand Society, yesterday announced her group would give a card party for benefit of the Children's Hospital Blood and Serum Bank on Saturday night.

The fourth annual campaign for the blood bank is now under way and this is the fourth year that the Lend a Hand Society has participated by sponsoring a benefit party.

Meantime, James H. Lemon, general chairman of the drive, announced a $50 contribution by the Rockport Fund, which gave a similar amount last year.

The American Legion, Washington Bridge League and The Post are jointly sponsoring the campaign for funds to maintain operation of the blood, serum and plasma bank at Children's Hospital. Individuals and organizations are encouraged to give benefit card parties, dances and other entertainments, remitting proceeds to The Post for addition to the fund.

First of the American Legion parties was held last night, whn Kenneth H. Nash Post and its auxiliary unit staged a benefit at the clubhouse, 208 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

Accompanied by a letter expressing "best wishes for success in this worthy work,'" a check for $6 was received yesterday from the Central High School Parent-Teacher Association to swell the blood bank chest.

Individuals and organizations are invited to call at The Post for souvenir tally cards to be used at bridge benefits.

First Attempt to Repeal Proposal to Pension Members of Congress Fails in House

The first attempt on the House floor to repeal the pensions-for-Congressmen provision of the newly enacted Civil Service Retirement Act was lost on a technicality yesterday, but these developments strengthened widespread belief that ultimately that section would be lifted from the law:

Representative Smith (Republican), of Ohio, served notice that unless the Civil Service Committee should act within 30 days on his resolution for repeal of the section, he would place on the Speaker's desk a petition for discharge of the committee. House rules would require immediate consideration of the measure, if 218 members signed the petition.

Six Republican members of the Wisconsin House delegation joined in a statement pledging themselves to work and vote for repeal.

Two new repeal resolutions were dropped into the House hopper by Representatives Gehrmann (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Rankin (Republican), of Montana.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who voted for the bill, declared his belief "that the effect of this act is very damaging to the morale of the country" and urged repeal of the section "in the interest of national unity."

The Civil Servcie Commission, retreating from its general defense of the act, issued a statement admitting the truth of the contention of Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and other opponents of the provision, that the law makes possible "substantial" Congressional annuities upon payment "of a small premium."

Representative McLean (Republican), New Jersey, offered a repealer as an amendment to the 160-million-dollar deficiency appropriation, but under the rules Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, who was in the chair, was constrained to hold the proposal "not germane."

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, appealed to the Civil Service Committee to "deal fairly" with opponents of the provision and report out a bill. Committee Chairman Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, told reporters that no immediate action was in sight.

Representative Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, chided members who contended that they did not know the provision was in the bill when it passed the House by unanimous consent.

"In my judgment it is a reflection on a member to claim ignorance of what is in a bill," he told the House. "What's he here for but to find out what's going on?"

Too Many Committees Here, Recreation Experts Learn

Milo F. Christiansen, acting coordinator of recreation for the District, told a room full of recreation devotees and experts yesterday that never in his travels had he seen a city with as many committees as has Washington.

He said he wished that they would learn to budget their time, as what they're doing can be done in 50 per cent of the time they are taking.

One of several speakers at the monthly meeting of the Council of Social Agencies, held at the K Street Y. W. C. A., the coordinator warned also against distractions from the main issue, that of obtaining more recreation facilities for Washington.

"Let's not confuse the matter of fan dancing, boondoggling and pink teas with the bigger issue at stake," he said, asserting that "it is a natural instinct" with every individual to play and engage in restful activities.

Harry Wender, attorney and civic leader, said "Uncle Sam is responsible for the conditions here today. The people giveth and the Congress and the White House taketh away."

The "big trouble," he told the council, is that "we can hold nobody responsible." Needed, he said, is a central organization "dominated by people who pay taxes."

He predicted that "before long we won't have any recreation facilities at all."

Maps showing the percentage of recreation areas withdrawn for defense uses were shown. These gave the number of fields and areas withdrawn, and the percentage of withdrawals were of the total as follows: Softball, 34 fields, 85.3 per cent; football, seven fields, 43.7 per cent; baseball, three fields, 18.8 per cent; soccer, one field, 33.33 per cent; hockey, one field, 25 per cent; lacrosse, one field, 100 per cent; badminton, one court, 25 per cent; volleyball, two courts, 28.5 per cent; horseshoes, 14 courts, 45.1 per cent; tennis, 55 courts, 68.2 per cent; roque, 2 courts, 25 per cent, and basketball, one court, 33.33 per cent.

Miss Ruth Prosky, activities employes counselor, Office of Price Administration, informed the council that the "tens of thousands" of persons now swarming into Washington "are as much needed to fight fascism as the Army and Navy."

There is, she asserted, "something about the coldness of the city and the brazenness of the profiteers" that makes the newcomers want to go back home. These newcomers, said she, "want to know people, to find a community of interest." She urged better recreation.

Christiansen said he had heard that the Interior Department's gymnasium had been turned into a filing room because the employes weren't using it for play.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, said she wished that the 175 public schools, costing 40 million dollars, were put to full recreation usage. It is depressing, she said, to see such buildings dark at night.
